DETROIT STRIKE ENDS; 24,000 TO RETURN TO JOBS

11,000 Still Idle in Second Walkout.

Detroit, Mich., March 4 (AP).—Striking employes of Chrysler corporation, ordered by the national war labor board to return to work, voted tonight to terminate an eight day strike which has paralyzed war production in six plants and kept more than 24,000 workers away from their jobs.

Chrysler strikers, whose work stoppage was one of two major Detroit area strikes which have halted war equipment output in 13 plants and immobilized more than 35,000 employes, agreed to return to their benches tomorrow morning.

The strike began Feb. 23 in Chrysler's main Dodge plant and spread to the De Soto plant with 18,734 employes walking out of the two factories, where tanks, trucks, and B-29 Super Fortress assemblies are made. In addition, 5,750 workers in four other Chrysler plants were laid off because of lack of parts.

Early Production Seen.

The other strike involved more than 11,000 Briggs Manufacturing company workers.

Chrysler spokesmen said previously that plants would begin producing within a few hours following a work resumption by employes.

The return-to-work vote, taken at a meeting of local No. 3 of the CIO United Automobile Workers, followed pleas for conclusion of the strike by union officials.

The meeting was called after a national war labor board hearing yesterday in Washington, D. C., at which union and Chrysler officials agreed there would be no company reprisals against employes if they returned to work; that grievance procedure would be used to determine whether eight men, whose discharge in a dispute over production rates caused the strike, would be taken back, and that production rate requirements would be arbitrated.

Conference Scheduled.

The company accused the eight men of failing to meet production schedules. Unionists charged the company with a speedup.

Briggs strikers rejected proposals to cast a return-to-work vote at a meeting this afternoon of local 212 of the CIO United Automobile Workers.

The unionists, however, made an initial step toward settlement of the dispute when they voted unanimously to place their grievance in the hands of the local's executive board, which was empowered to name a committee to meet with management tomorrow.

The committee, according to John Murphy, local president, will be instructed to inform management the union will submit the grievance to an impartial umpire.

The Briggs walkout started Tuesday after the company discharged seven minor union officials, accusing them of fomenting previous strikes.

Cafes to Open Battle Today with Petrillo

Chicago cafe and night club operators, who estimate they have lost three-quarters of a million dollars during the first week of the midnight curfew, prepared for a showdown today with James C. Petrillo's Chicago Federation of Musicians in a battle that is expected to set a pattern for the rest of the nation.

The operators, speaking thru John Comise, president of the newly formed Cafe Owners' association, have sought a compromise, under which the musicians' union would work a minimum 30 hour, six day week, to cut operating costs found prohibitive under the curfew's reduced operating hours.

Comise said last night that today, the operators, thru the association, would consider present 40 hour week contracts voided by the curfew's imposition and would put the musicians on the 30 hour minimum week.

Warns of Firing 3,500.

If the musician's federation then acts to withdraw any band from any cafe, Comise said, he will order the immediate discharge of the approximately 3,500 musicians employed by the association's members.

A spokesman for the union, with whom the cafe men will meet today, was equally firm. "We will not deal with an association," he said. "We will deal with any operator on an individual basis. If they have any complaints, let them come to us and make them." The union has indicated it will reject any request for less than a 48 hour week.

Petrillo was in the city yesterday, but said he was not informed as to details of the dispute. He is head of the powerful American Federation of Musicians as well as the Chicago federation.

Income Slashed 60 Per Cent.

The estimate of the night club losses was made by Milton Raynor of the law firm of Raynor and Rosenberg, attorneys for the Cafe Owners' association. "The drop represents 60 to 70 per cent of gross income," he said.

Raynor said the Chicago association is acting as a hub for action by cafemen in other major cities thruout the country, whom he and Comise will represent in an audience with President Roosevelt in an effort to obtain modification of the curfew soon.

Meanwhile, restaurant owners prepared to protest formally to the war man power commission what they considered unwarranted discrimination in the interpretation of the curfew as applied to restaurants in regulations effective at midnight tonight.

Tells What Rules Are.

D. F. Kiesau, executive vice president of the Chicago Restaurant Owners' association, said after studying a series of three conflicting edicts, that the rules would apply as follows:

Restaurants which have been open on a 24 hour basis or thru the complete period from midnight until 8 a. m. may continue to stay open during their present hours. All restaurants except those in the above categories must close at midnight.

However, the latest WMC word on the much changed restaurant regulations allows all restaurants to open at their usual hour if no entertainment is furnished and liquor is not sold.

Kiesau said he had received a flood of protests, similar to those which forced the opening modification, about the midnight closing order for non-24 hour restaurants. He said it is depriving war workers on swing shifts and other persons of a place to obtain food. His organization represents 2,200 restaurants in the city, doing 85 per cent of the business.

SCALES DRAW LONGEST LINE AT SANTO TOMAS

MANILA, March 4 (AP).—One of the longest queues in Manila is at the Santo Tomas scales.

As liberated internees and prisoners of war await transportation home they are eager to restore as much weight as possible now that good food is plentiful.

There is only one scale and every day they wait in line—persons who lost as much as 100 pounds under Japanese captivity—to see how many ounces they have put on daily. All have gained appreciably in the last couple of weeks, some enormously.

PARENTS' BLOOD FATAL TO BABY

Dies from Clashing of Red Corpuscles.

Champaign, Ill., March 4 [Special].—Warrant Officer William G. Colebourn, recently ordered transferred to Chanute field, near here, from Yale university, arrived at Burnham city hospital this morning to find himself a six hour loser in a race against death.

When Colebourn entered the hospital at 9 a. m. he was told that his four day old daughter, victim of a rare blood disease caused by the blood types of the parents, had died shortly after 3 a. m.

The infant was delivered Wednesday a month prematurely by a Caesarean section to which physicians resorted in an effort to save its life by blood transfusions.

Lacks Red Corpuscles.

The baby weighed 6½ pounds when born but was in a critical condition due to lack of red corpuscles in the blood. Several transfusions were given and yesterday physicians reported the child "much improved" and expressed hopes for its life.

Maj. Carl Greenstein, obstetrician at Chanute field, who was in charge of the case, said the O-RH negative blood of the mother and the O-RH positive blood of the father caused a combination destructive to the offspring's red corpuscles. Transfusions given were of O-RH negative blood donated by Charles Lyons, 26, a Sidell farmer.

Spark Kept Alive.

Max Hoagland, superintendent of the hospital, said the baby's condition took a sharp turn for the worse about 9 p. m. yesterday. A resuscitator was employed, he said, and several times during the night a spark of life was pumped into the small body after the infant had apparently ceased to breathe. Maj. Greenstein and other physicians were with the baby when death came.

The mother was told of the death when she awakened this morning. She had come thru the ordeal of the Caesarean birth in what was described as a "strong condition" and last night had been greatly cheered by reports of the baby's improvement.

Raids on Britain Renewed; Dresden Leveled, Nazi Says

Villages Strafed

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—Piloted German planes struck at Britain early today and again tonight in the first such blows since last June 13.

Tonight explosions were heard in the coastal region. Coastal anti-aircraft guns fired at raiders racing in from the North sea over the coast of East Anglia. Some planes dropped flares which were quickly shot down.

One Reaches London.

Six German planes were shot down early this morning out of the force not considered large—which hit at widely separated places in northern and eastern England. One raider penetrated to the London area.

The attack cost Britain the lives of a number of people and injuries to others. Persons of all ages were included in the casualties. Village streets were wrecked and homes and public buildings damaged.

Reports indicated more gunning of people and of villages and towns than bombing, altho high explosives were dropped on scattered communities.

American Soldier Hurt.

In one town an American soldier was injured. In another a 17 year old girl was hit by a bullet which tore thru the roof of her home. A freight train was attacked and a signal man killed. A chief of police and a lawyer on duty as an air raid warden were hurt.

The Germans also continued to send V-missiles into southern England, the air ministry reported. Damage and casualties were caused.

Thousands of Dead

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, March 4.—Dresden, one of the reich's most ancient and cherished cities, has ceased to exist, Rudolf Sparing, German Overseas News agency correspondent, said on the radio tonight.

"The allied air raids on Dresden on Feb. 14 and 15 caused the greatest destruction a big urban area has ever suffered," he said. "Not a single detached building remains intact or even capable of reconstruction. The town area is devoid of human life. A great city has been wiped from the map of Europe.

Million People in City.

"Tens of thousands who lived and worked in the city are now buried under its ruins.

"What happened on that evening of Feb. 15? There were one million people in Dresden at the time, including 600,000 bombed-out evacuees and refugees from the east.

"The raging fires which spread rapidly in the narrow streets killed many from sheer lack of oxygen.

"Tens of thousands who succeeded in getting out, no one knows how, fled to the green belt surrounding the city.

Third Wave of Bombers.

"Then at midnight another British bomber fleet appeared on the blood-red horizon and caused further destruction among them with fragmentation bombs and machine guns.

"Twelve hours later a third wave spread further devastation.

"Today we can only speak of what once was Dresden in the past tense."

Basel and Zurich Bombed, Fires Started, Swiss Say

BERN, Switzerland, March 4 (AP).—Foreign planes bombed the suburbs of Zurich, Switzerland's biggest city, and Basel at the frontier today. Twenty-five bomb craters were counted in the Basel freight yards, warehouses were wrecked, and a crashing bomber started numerous fires. Many persons were injured in the cities.

MARINES PUSH ENEMY TOWARD ISLAND CLIFFS

Leathernecks Mark Gains in Yards.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Guam, March 5 [Monday]—(AP).—Stiffened Japanese resistance held American gains to local advances of 50 to 100 yards on Iwo Island yesterday but several hundred more enemy troops were killed in a fanatical counter-attack.

Adm. Nimitz, announcing "small local advances" in his bulletin today, reported that 12,864 Japanese dead had been counted up to 6 p. m. Saturday—13 days of the fiercest fight of the Pacific war.

This total was 8,080 higher than his count up to 6 p. m. last Monday, the eighth day of the battle.

The Japanese counter-attack was thrown against Maj. Gen. Keller E. Rockey's 5th division on the northwest end of the crooked battle line across the upper third of Iwo.

Marines Inch Ahead.

Maj. Gen. Clifton B. Cates' 4th marines, on the east flank, overcame a strong center of resistance as they inched forward over rocky ground.

Nimitz made no mention of the progress of Maj. Gen. Graves B. Erskine's 3d division, holding down the center of the American line and shoving the Japanese toward cliffs fringing the little island's north and northeast shore line.

In rear areas the marines continued sealing caves in which some fanatical defenders were taking refuge and from which they refused to emerge. Nevertheless an increasing number were surrendering, and the prisoner list now numbers 45 Koreans and 36 Japanese.

Navy Covers Marines.

Naval guns covered the ground advances.

The battle-weary Japanese defenders of Iwo are being compressed between Lt. Gen. Holland M. Smith's leathernecks and the deep sea off the steep northern shore line.

American hospital planes continued to use the southern Iwo bomber field altho it was under enemy artillery fire during the day.

Carrier planes bombed Chichi in the Bonin Islands immediately north of Iwo while marine fighters and medium bombers swept Ponape in the western Carolines and navy search planes bombed enemy targets in the Marshall Islands.

Use Flame Throwing Tanks.

ABOARD VICE ADM. TURNER'S EXPEDITIONARY FLAGSHIP OFF IWO ISLAND, March 4 [Via Navy radio]—(AP).—Weary, rain-soaked 4th division marines sent flame throwing tanks into the intense battle of Iwo to uproot strong pockets of enemy resistance which were impeding their advance on the right flank of the irregular American line across the narrow island.

The Japanese are holed up in what appears to be a sunken crater. To the west is a high cliff on which the jagged terrain provides many caves and concealed positions from which the Nipponese can fight back savagely with small arms, mortars, and guns of buried tanks.

The floor of the crater has dozens of gun positions. To the east, toward the ocean, is high ground known as Turkey knob which, too, defied the advancing marines. In such a constricted area the Leathernecks must wipe out the enemy without the support of artillery and sea and air bombardment.

British May Let Stalin Stay at Buckingham Palace

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 4.—If he comes to London for three power talks this summer, Marshal Stalin may stay at Buckingham palace even tho he is not the head of a state, which post is held by Mikhail I. Kalinin, president of the soviet presidium. In the past, said the London press today, only royalty and heads of states stayed in the palace, which would qualify President Roosevelt. One paper said altho a precedent may be established for Stalin, "in any case after a few days, four at the most, Stalin and Roosevelt would go to their embassies."

LONDON, March 5 [Monday]—(AP).—The Red army in a sensational new 62 mile break-thru reached the Baltic coast near Kolberg yesterday, slicing eastern Pomerania into three segments and trapping perhaps 200,000 German troops in one of the war's greatest double encirclement operations.

Attacking simultaneously on an arc south and east of Stettin, Berlin's main port, other soviet forces drove to within 14 miles of Stettin, to within two miles of its eastern bastion of Stargard, and also smashed up to the lower Oder river on a 10 mile front on both sides of the crossing town of Schwedt. The lower wing of this drive reached to within 35 miles northeast of Berlin.

80 Miles from Danzig.

As these armored formations virtually destroyed Germany's front on the Pomeranian flank, other units far to the east drove to within 30 miles south of Danzig, while in East Prussia the remnants of 20 Nazi divisions were hurled into a 275 square mile Baltic pocket southwest of Koenigsburg and were being wiped out in hand-to-hand fighting and by soviet artillery.

Overwhelming 600 localities, including 10 major German strongholds, Marshal Zhukov's 1st White Russian army in a four day advance reached the Pomeranian coast in the area of Kolberg, 55 miles east of the heavily fortified German port of Swinemuende, while Marshal Rokossovsky's 2d White Russian army also reached the coast and captured Koeslin, 24 miles east of Kolberg.

Victory Cannon Boom.

Premier Stalin announced these triumphs in two orders of the day as Moscow's victory cannon touched off another celebration last night in the soviet capital.

The twin thrusts to the Baltic coast ripped thru staggering German lines and doomed the chance of a Nazi flanking attack against the central forces of the Berlin-bound Red army.

Locking and double bolting the door to an 8,280 square mile area to the east, including Danzig territory, the Russians had isolated the elements of 20 or more Nazi divisions in a sector no larger than the state of Connecticut. Moscow dispatches said the bag of German troops was expected to be as large as in East Prussia.

More than 700 towns and villages were swept up by the two Russian armies in their latest Pomeranian advances, Moscow said.

Drive 62 Miles North.

Lancing 62 miles north from Reetz, 41 miles southeast of Stettin, the big port at the mouth of the Oder river, Zhukov's army overran four great military super-highways connecting western and eastern Pomerania and also cut the Stettin-Danzig and Swinemuende-Danzig trunk railways feeding German garrisons based around Stolp, in eastern Pomerania; Gdynia, naval base in the Polish corridor; and Danzig, another valuable Nazi naval base.

In their surge northward Zhukov's troops toppled the strongholds of Dramburg, Labes, Regenwalde, Freienwalde, Wangerin Schivelbein, Koerlin, Falkenburg, and Tempelburg.

The two great strokes came as both Berlin and Moscow dispatches said the restless eastern front was astir all the way from the Baltic to the approaches of Vienna, Austrian capital. Major Red army assaults toward Berlin, Dresden, and Vienna were believed to be imminent, German reports said.

YANKS BESIEGE CITY; SPLIT NAZI DEFENSE FORCE

Germans Say Rhine Crossing Repelled.

PARIS, March 5 [Monday]—(AP).—The United States 1st army was closing on Cologne from a suburb less than two miles away today.

Other allied armies were grinding up remaining German opposition along a 75 mile front of the Rhine river.

Heavy, pointblank American artillery fire was being hurled in constant streams to the east bank of the stream, and the Germans broadcast that the United States 9th army already had attempted to send tanks across Duesseldorf's "south bridge" and in the area of Krefeld but had been repulsed.

There was no confirmation of the German assertions, but Gen. Eisenhower has announced his intention to miss no opportunity to get across the great river, and the allied command certainly will do its utmost to take advantage of the enemy's confusion growing out of the gigantic defeat inflicted upon the Germans west of the Rhine.

Nazis Blow Up Bridge.

The Duesseldorf bridge which the Germans mentioned is known to have been blown up, and all others in that zone are impassable, while in the Krefeld area early Sunday the Germans dynamited the Adolf Hitler super-highway bridge at Uerdingen. American patrols got across this bridge and returned before it was blasted into the Rhine. This could be the source of the German reports of an American crossing.

The 1st army sent tanks plunging to the Rhine a few miles north of Cologne, splitting the defenders. Those south of the armored column were falling back into the city, so choked with rubble that enemy columns had trouble reaching the only bridge still intact across the Rhine.

Siege Arc Before City.

A Yank force was in Cologne's suburb of Loevenich, which is a mile and a half from the city proper. As one division after another drew up to the city's approaches, a dispatch from that front declared that Cologne "is ours when we want it." A siege arc was drawn up before the city.

[Reconnaissance photographs of Cologne disclosed that the western entry to the Hohensollern road and railway bridge had been blocked by a collapse of the super-structure after an attack by more than 850 R. A. F. heavy bombers Saturday. The photos showed that the Butz suspension road bridge to the south had been destroyed and was blocking the river.]

Hitler's "people's army" was surrendering with hardly a shot being fired as infantry crept closer, and tanks and bulldozers crunched thru debris-strewn villages near the outskirts.

Narrow Nazi Hold on Rhine.

The United States 9th and Canadian 1st army were crushing the remnants of three German armies fleeing across the Rhine. The enemy's hold on the west bank of the river north of Duesseldorf had shrunk to an area only 10 miles long and six miles wide.

The 9th army, battling nine miles northward, stormed into Duisburg's cross-Rhine suburb of Homberg. Other forces swung around Homberg, a manufacturing city of 35,000, and reached the Rhine in an effort to capture the railroad bridge just to the north.

Hold 20 Miles of Rhine.

The Americans held almost unbroken control of 20 miles of the Rhine's west bank along its winding course from Duesseldorf to Homberg, and German broadcasts declared that Duisburg, Duesseldorf, and Colonge had become "front line cities" with all three under artillery fire.

The 9th army's 84th division had fought a half mile into Homberg and to the south was close to the Rhine directly opposite Duisburg.

The magnitude of the German collapse and the disorder of the retreating troops was such that the next few days were expected to determine whether the enemy can rally on the east bank of the Rhine and prevent an allied sweep across the river.

Canadians Reach Rhine.

The Canadians and Americans were driving in rapidly from the west. The Canadians also reached the Rhine by capturing Vynem north of the German anchor city of Xanten and were pressing southward along the river only eight miles from the Ruhr crossings at Wesel.

Among towns captured on the west was Issum, seven miles from a highway bridge at Rheinberg. Rheinberg also was imperiled by Americans fighting only five miles away on the south. Rheinberg's bridge was one of six still standing in the area where the Germans were being pinned against the river.

The others are one battered highway bridge at Wesel, one railway bridge, a single decker for highway traffic at Homberg, which the Americans now are trying to capture, and one railway, one highway, and one temporary bridge at Dulsburg.

Strike for Bonn, Too.

While laying siege to Cologne, the 1st army also was striking for Bonn, forging across the Erft river at two points 10 and 11 miles west of that communications city lying 15 miles southeast of Cologne.

The United States 3d army to the south drove across the Kyll river, last big water hurdle before the Rhine, and established a bridgehead at Hosten, 45 miles from the Rhineland city of Coblenz, where Americans of another generation stood watch on the Rhine in World War I. Other 3d army troops battering northeast of Pruem were 40 miles from the Rhine.

The United States 7th army seized control of a five mile stretch of high ground two to three miles south of Saarbruecken and was raining shells on that capital of the Saar basin.

Maj. Gen. Terry Allen's 104th infantry division was closest to Cologne. After seizing Koenigsdorf in a night assault, these troops battled into Widdersdorf, two miles from the city's western outskirts. But the 8th infantry was only two and a half miles west of the city after seizing Frechen.

In all, 19 Rhineland villages fell to night attacks and five more were captured during the afternoon.

The siege arc was drawn up from a point six miles north of Cologne to a point one and a half miles west of the city, and along this arc five other towns were captured.

Yanks Roll On.

On the north flank, one column was digging into the Germans caught between the Rhine and the Erft river south of Duesseldorf. In this drive the Americans captured Ramrath, six miles south of the confluence of the Erft and Rhine.

The attack was rolling all along the front. On the south, the 1st army crossed the Erft and captured Weilerswist, a scant 10 miles from Bonn, and Derkum, also across the Erft five miles farther south.

Twenty miles to the southwest, the Americans captured Schleiden, a Siegfried line strongpoint which held up the 1st army advance in the campaign for control of the Roer river dams preceding the current offensive.

Other forces fought their way into Gemuend.

American Drive Nears Cologne

U. S. AND BRITISH LAND DOUBLE AIR BLOWS ON NAZIS

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—American and British heavy bombers, guarded by hundreds of fighter planes, delivered a double punch at Germany today, striking Ruhr transportation facilities and a variety of targets thruout southwest Germany. It was the 20th consecutive day of attacks.

At the same time 15th air force Fortresses and Liberators from Italy attacked Nazi rail lines in Austria and Hungary serving German troops on the Hungarian front.

More than 1,000 Fortresses and Liberators of the United States 8th air force protected by 500 fighter planes attacked Ulm and other communications and industrial centers in the Munich area. Some of the formations were forced to return to their bases in England without reaching their targets because of the weather.

Three Bombers Missing.

Most of the bombers, however, broke thru. They encountered only weak flak and no fighter opposition. Lt. William Owens of Kokomo, Ind., described the weather as "the worst I've ever seen."

An 8th air force bulletin said three bombers and two fighters were missing. The announcement also said that out of a total of more than 4,800 planes dispatched in the last three days the 8th had lost 36 bombers and 18 fighters.

A fleet of 600 R. A. F. Lancasters struck the Wanne-Eickel freight yards, largest in the Ruhr, in an attack described as "heavy." Polish and R. A. F. Mustang squadrons escorted the bombers.

The Italy based bombers, making their 19th operation in 20 days, hit targets at Szombathely and Sopron in Hungary, and at Wiener Neustadt, Bruck, and Graz in Austria.

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, railroads also were bombed.

Brenner Bridges Bombed.

In addition, medium bombers of the United States 12th air force in Italy bombed Brenner rail line bridges and German communication and transportation facilities in northern Italy.

Snow and a thick overcast, cloaking most of the western front, restricted operations of tactical planes supporting the allied offensive. The United States 9th air force was able to make only four sorties. The 9th made 1,303 fighter bomber and 625 medium and light bomber trips yesterday with the loss of three planes. Ninth pilots reported they destroyed or damaged 42 armored vehicles, 371 motor transport vehicles, 1,200 freight cars, 56 locomotives, and 50 barges.

FIRST B-29 LANDS ON IWO AFTER RAIDING TOKYO

U. S. 21ST BOMBER COMMAND, Guam, March 5 [Monday] (AP).—The first B-29 landed on the southern tip of embattled Iwo Island Sunday en route to its Marianas base from the bombing of Tokyo. The Super Fortress came down on Iwo when its gasoline supply became dangerously low. It was piloted by Lt. Raymond F. Malo of Danville, Ill. The plane's bomb bay doors stuck open over the target and the additional drag increased gasoline consumption.

With the crew alerted for a crash landing at sea, Malo headed for Iwo. On the third landing attempt the Super Fortress settled, braked, and slid down the 3,000 foot runway lined with marine spectators. Occasional Japanese mortar shells burst near by.

The Super Fort's reserve gasoline tank lines were repaired at Iwo and the plane returned to its Tinian base. Super Fortresses flying in force had bombed Tokyo heavily yesterday. All returned safely except one which was forced to ditch en route home. The crew was picked up.

ROBBED OF SHOES AND COAT.

Three men in a black sedan held up Corp. Nick S. Febiano of 330 W. 24th st. early yesterday at Aberdeen and 47th sts. and robbed him of his brown shoes, a brown camel's hair topcoat, and a wristwatch, he reported to police.

ILLINOISAN SACRIFICES LIFE TO SAVE CREW OF BOMBER AT SEA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 4.—An Illinois Fortress pilot recently gave his life so six members of his crew might live, it was disclosed tonight. Battered by Berlin anti-aircraft fire, the Fortress "Challenger" plunged into the North sea en route home. As it sank, the airmen released two rubber dinghies, but waves washed them away.

Second Lt. Robert C. Long, 24, of Pleasant Hill, Ill., swam 50 yards thru icy water to catch one of the dinghies for his crew, who had recovered the other one but were perilously overburdening it. The struggle apparently overcame Long, and he was unable to bring the craft back.

Only after 45 minutes of furious paddling and bailing by the other crewmen, with Sgt. Jack Cook of Hot Springs, Ark., gunner, serving as a human propellor by kicking and pushing, was the other dinghy able to reach the stricken pilot. Two and a half hours later an air-sea rescue launch reached the airmen, but Long and Cook subsequently died from exposure.

19 YANKS RISK LIVES, BUT CAN'T SAVE RHINE SPAN

Chicagoan Among Them; All Are Decorated.

NEAR UERDINGEN, Germany, March 4 (AP).—Nineteen soldier volunteers who had risked their lives less than 12 hours earlier in trying to keep the Germans from blowing up the Adolf Hitler highway bridge over the Rhine received silver star hero awards today. Among them were Pvt. August Greco, 2841 W. Arthington st., Chicago, and Staff Sgt. Thomas Haley, Hillsboro, Ill.

It was one of the promptest group awards on record. It was made for one of the bravest feats of the war—crawling out on the shell-raked suspension bridge in the darkness and trying to find and cut the wires leading to tons of hidden dynamite which might explode at any moment.

It was a glorious failure. They were driven back by flames from burning tar on the bridge roadway which had been ignited by grenades and which silhouetted them to enemy gunners. One patrol got back at daylight, only 20 minutes before the Nazis blew up the bridge, one of the chief highway links between Berlin and the western Rhineland.

Commander Also Decorated.

As soon as the commander of the second armored division, Brig. Gen. Isaac D. White of Des Moines, Ia., heard the details of their feat, he rounded up the men and pinned silver stars on them and their commander, Col. Sidney R. Hinds, Nashville, Tenn., whose tanks and doughboys previously had captured Uerdigen, a suburb of the German industrial city of Krefeld.

Four of the men couldn't be located immediately, but 15 of the young heroes stood at attention in a drizzling rain in a muddy German farmyard while White pinned the medals on them and told them the whole "Hell on Wheels" division was proud of them.

Afterward Capt. George L. Youngblood, 31, a former Charleston, N. C., civil engineer, told of their exploit while his men, still wearing their dirty battle clothing and weary from lack of sleep, sat stiffly uncomfortable on the edges of chairs in a German family's neat living room.

Look for Wires.

"We hoped to locate the wires leading to the dynamite charges on the bridge and keep them from blowing it," said Youngblood. "We started out well after dark and finally got on the bridge, altho small arms fire kept us down for a while. We checked each column and other critical points on the superstructure. The bridge is 1,420 feet long with steel girders on top. It had car tracks and room for two lanes of motor traffic.

"Sometimes a bullet whizzed by us from the small arms fight going on north of the bridge on our side of the river, but it was that fire on the bridge and the other big fire in a three story building across the Rhine that worried us most.

"You see, those flames silhouetted us to any one on either shore and a big gun was banging away at the bridge at two minute intervals.

Shells Rock Bridge.

"Every time one of those big shells hit, you could feel the bridge rock and sway."

One of the most hazardous stretches was a 15 foot section where the flooring had been blown away. "It was a 75 foot drop to the ground," said Staff Sgt. Dalton A. Griffith of Petersburg, Ind., who walked across a steel girde on the left side of the bridge gap.

The engineers located and cut about six wires, but those apparently were not attached to the demolition charges. They worked their way across the river until they were above German soil and got within 75 yards of the burning tar.

A few hours later, Lt. Guy E. Amspoker, 21, of Georgia, set out with five other men on a second patrol to see if it were possible to get doughboys with equipment over the bridge.

"We left about 5:30 a. m. and got back at 6:40—just 20 minutes before the Germans blew the bridge," he said. "The bridge was still being shelled intermittently and we got over German soil on the other side before we saw it was impossible for our infantry to cross while the roadway was burning."

YANKS HERD 800 GERMANS INTO TOWN'S CHURCH

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NIEDERAUSSEN, Germany, March 4.—Jammed in the town's Catholic church, 800 civilians today slept, ate, chattered or stared ahead dully, benumbed by the 1st army offensive which yesterday swept thru this town and then left it far behind.

Lt. Charles A. Henderson.

Finds 350 in Raid Shelter.

"I found 350 living in a deep, concrete air raid shelter more than 300 feet long on the edge of town," he said. "And there's another 300 in another big bunker over yonder. I told them to stay there until military government teams got here. It's their baby. We aren't equipped to do more than round them up and screen out the volkssturm. MG [military government] must feed them."

The rain had helped tanks churn up the streets into a mud bowl. The churchyard was a soggy mass of turf supporting dull eyed men, women, and children staring over a wall at the stream of mechanized vehicles.

A housewife stepped up to Henderson and asked: "Sprechen sie Deutsch?" The lieutenant shook his head and pointed toward a flat chested fraulein and indicated she spoke both German and English. The woman moved off on an unspoken errand and we stepped into the church.

Herded Like Cattle.

The dim light filtering thru broken, stained glass windows disclosed hundreds of men, women, and children massed like cattle. Their babbling voices smote us almost as strongly as did the reek of their bodies.

Straw had been spread on the floor and many were stretched out either dozing or half asleep. One old man, wearing a shapeless cap, stood immobile, leaning against the wall, his face outlined sharply by a shaft of light.

Far ahead around the altar mothers and children stood in groups munching on bread. Others passed up and down the stairs to the choir loft where still others were sleeping.

"We were fighting 200 yards east of here yesterday when the general arrived," said Henderson. "He told me to round up the civilians and here they are."

ARMY EXPLAINS LAG IN SUPPLIES TO FEED FRANCE

U. S. Pledges Based on Quick Victory.

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—What was the genesis of the program of allied relief aid to France?

Details, including the much rumored "Plan A" covering the civil affairs supply planning of the allies prior to the invasion of Normandy, were obtained today from officials at the war department.

There have been reports that this plan conveyed promises to the French of large quantities of civilian supplies and that these were not carried out, giving rise to controversial discussions. It has been suggested that President Roosevelt had issued directives to the army to give greater aid to the French and that his instructions were likewise unfulfilled.

As described by those familiar with the plan's formulation, the situation was this:

Before the troops stormed the beachheads of Normandy last June the allies made alternative plans based on a series of assumptions as to how successful the invasion might be.

Details of "Plan A."

One of these plans—Plan A—was confided to the French authorities in Washington last June, a few days before D-day, and is said to have since led to some misunderstanding of the problem.

Plan A, it was stated, was based on the supposition that a collapse of all German resistance might occur soon after the allies had effected successful landings in France and that the Germans would not pursue a "scorched earth" policy in their withdrawal.

On that supposition an estimate was made in Plan A that the whole of continental France would require for civilian relief in a six month period a total of approximately 2,225,000 tons of imported supplies. This included some 700,000 tons of food, 150,000 tons of petroleum, 40,000 tons of soap, 400,000 tons of agricultural rehabilitation materials, and 900,000 tons of coal.

Food Needs Listed.

Food requirements included estimates of 420,000 tons of wheat, and 70,000 tons of canned meats and stew.

The assumptions of Plan A, of course, never materialized. Instead of a collapse of resistance, the allies encountered stiff opposition and a German policy of a truly "scorched" France.

It was disclosed at the war department that during the first six months after D-day the allies delivered in that part of France which was liberated 262,150 tons of civilian relief supplies. This included 194,000 tons of food, 64,000 tons of petroleum, 640 tons of medical supplies, 250 tons of clothing, 2,500 tons of soap, and 300 tons of blankets.

U. S. S. OREGON OF SPANISH WAR IS STILL AFLOAT

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Guam, March 4 [Via navy radio]—(AP).—The glamor ship of the Spanish-American war—the gallant old battleship Oregon—came out to the western Pacific to die in this modern war. But she is still afloat. Navy men who had planned to sink her to help build a breakwater concede now she wouldn't even make good breakwater material. The Oregon lies at anchor in a hastily blasted little inlet thru coral reefs on an island base.

One of the hero ships of the Spanish-American conflict, the Oregon made history when she steamed from the west coast around the tip of South America up to Cuba in time to join in the battle against the Spanish fleet at Santiago just before the turn of the century.

When towed out to the west Pacific to be sunk, the Oregon was loaded with 1,400 tons of dynamite—since unloaded—and a rumor spread that she was going to be towed right into Tokyo harbor and blown up.

ITALIANS OF 8TH ARMY WIN AREA ALONG ADRIATIC

ROME, March 4 (AP).—Italian troops attached to the British 8th army have driven the enemy from the entire coastal area south of the Po di Primaro river and have taken nearly 200 prisoners, allied headquarters announced today.

Near Casaglia, 16 miles south-southwest of Bologna, United States 5th army units drove off a German party attempting to infiltrate their lines and then moved forward several hundred yards.

Additional hilltops were seized by 5th army troops in the rough country north of Monte della Torraccia and Monte Castello, both of which were captured in recent attacks by the United States 10th mountain division and Brazilian troops.

Launched after a heavy artillery preparation, the Italian attack on the Adriatic end of the front was given strong air and tank support.

SON OF TOKYO'S 'PEACE' ENVOY TO U. S. KILLED

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—Berlin's Transocean agency several times today broadcast an announcement of the death of Saburo Kurusu, who talked peace in Washington while Japan struck at Pearl Harbor. Later Transocean said this was erroneous.

Transocean corrected the announcement to say that it was Kurusu's son, Capt. Makoto Kurusu, who had been killed, dying in air combat Feb. 16 against American carrier-based planes attacking Tokyo.

Tokyo broadcasts heard earlier had announced the death of the son, who was born in the United States in 1919, and was an engineer pilot attached to the Japanese army aerial navigation research institute.

YANKS FIND REST IN CHATEAU ON COLOGNE ROAD

Nazi General Once Lived in Count's Home.

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH THE U. S. 1ST ARMY OUTSIDE COLOGNE, March 4.—Where Gen. Sepp Dietrich, one eyed exbartender and bellhop who commands the German 6th SS [elite guard] panzer army, once lived, G. Is today sprawled in unaccustomed luxury under massive Renaissance oil paintings.

The general wouldn't have liked this scene. Nor would the aristocratic owner, Count von Trips. But neither was there, and the Americans were, altho they were packing their gear to move on as we left the sprawling stone chateau.

It was typical of many Rhineland chateaux now in the hands of the Americans. The aristocrat's framed family trees and crest hung in the hallway beside hunting trophies.

Owners There Recently.

Dietrich had paused here while his panzer army was being groomed on the Cologne plain for a major role in Field Marshal von Rundstedt's Ardennes offensive. In the master bedrooms, soldiers saw evidence that the villa's owners could not have been absent very long.

Special heating lamps were in the marble and tiled bathroom where the countess had left them. Her vanity table held dozens of lotions, unguents, ointments, and perfumes. The private papers of both count and countess, including old checkbooks, were lodged in massively carved cabinets.

American soldiers lounged about on their scattered bedrolls. And in what had been the state dining hall, a kitchen crew was busy at stoves preparing dinner.

"Want a pork chop sandwich, Bud?" asked Mess Sgt. Wilbur F. Lane of 155 S. Channing st., Elgin, Ill.

Spear Past Fanatical Nazis.

The 104th division of this army reached Lovenich and Weiden, Cologne suburbs, today. Lt. Col. Aurend Linker of Kewanee, Ill., executive officer, said the division had shot ahead by by-passing a huge slag heap known as the sugar loaf even while one battalion was fighting about 300 fanatical Germans who had to be exterminated.

"One Nazi stood up and screamed, 'Heil Hitler! I fight to end for der fuehrer! To hell with Roosevelt!' The boys got him quickly," Linker said.

While attempting to withdraw survivors from the slag heap, a German battalion commander was captured.

Yanks of the 3d armored division yesterday took one battalion of 200 men while they slept. The battalion had just arrived to "hold at all costs," but had decided to catch a nap before fighting.

Shortly after armored patrols of Lt. Col. Prentiss E. Yeomans of Syracuse, N. Y., reached the Rhine this morning, the commander received a radio message from the corps which said, "Congratulations on spearheading corps, leading elements of 1st army troops to reach the Rhine."

The corps later sent word to all artillery units, ordering them to be careful and not drop any shells on Cologne's famed Gothic cathedral, "the Dom." Low clouds and thick ground haze and fog which hampered fighting today also obscured any view of the cathedral's spires.

132 SHIPS SAVED BY AUSTRALIAN SALVAGE BOARD

CANBERRA, Australia, March 4 (AP).—Between 1942 and the end of last January, 132 Australian and allied ships aggregating 660,000 tons have been salvaged by the Australian marine salvage board, the commonwealth supply minister reported today. The ships were victims of attacks by Japanese submarines, surface raiders, and aircraft or had been wrecked in Australian and New Guinea waters.

A large number of the vessels which have been refloated were Liberty ships and about 500,000 tons of valuable war equipment was recovered.

The ministry told the story of the Rufus King, American vessel which went ashore off the Queensland coast late in 1943, breaking in two. The halves were found a mile apart. Much equipment was salvaged from each section and then one half, with engines intact, was towed to Brisbane.

Perfume Boom in France; Makers Get More Alcohol

PARIS, March 4.—Quotas of pure alcohol allocated to the perfume industry during the first quarter of this year were increased 50 per cent over the previous quarter. The scent boom is attributed to purchases by men of the allied forces, especially Americans, as gifts for friends back home.

CAPTURED RED WORKMEN KILL NAZIS AND FLEE

MOSCOW, March 4 (AP).—While R. A. F. bombers attacked Dresden one night early in January, more than 1,000 Russian laborers revolted, clubbed their Nazi guards to death, and escaped into the woods of Saxony.

Pravda Correspondent Boris Polevoy today told the story of the "U. S. S. R." guerrilla unit. They scored several victories behind the German lines during their four weeks' campaign.

The existence of the unit was disclosed during the fight for a bridgehead over a river which can not yet be named.

Battle for Bridgehead.

Sapper Capt. Alexei Kustov, describing the battle, said:

"My boys and I got across on boats and planks at night when Maj. Naumov's motorized infantry joined us. German artillery and machine guns raked us but Naumov's tanks aided us from the opposite bank. We were pinned down but we were determined to hold on until daylight when reëforcements might arrive.

"Suddenly I saw mortar shells exploding over the German positions. I had no mortars of my own. I was mystified, but so were the Germans. The mortars were firing from their rear. Then I saw a crowd of men dressed in every imaginable kind of clothing running towards us from a grove. They were brandishing rifles in the air and shouting.

Want to Fight for Reds.

"We held our fire and soon these men were hugging us. Around their arms were red bands with the inscription U. S. S. R. Red ribbons were stuck in their caps.

"'We are soviet men. We want to fight with the Red army,' they told us."

Pravda said the guerrilla leader, Serafim Shamilin, gave this account:

"We were treated as slaves. The Germans beat us daily. In January we knew the Red army was coming and as we saw thousands of fugitives pouring into Dresden we decided to make a break.

"We chose a moment when British planes were raiding the city at night to overpower our guards and kill them. We used pieces of bricks and sticks. In the woods we collected and organized our brigade. We had 18 rifles and three submachine guns. That same night we attacked a food depot under cover of darkness and frightened away a battalion, who left their arms behind.

Grew Like Snowball.

"We fought our way forward, getting more arms as we went along and our brigade grew like a snowball as liberated people joined us.

"The roads were clogged with endless streams of refugees and each village and railway station was swarming with mobs of people which enabled us to move without attracting notice.

"We burned up ammunition dumps near Calau [50 miles southeast of Berlin], demolished one of the bridges over the Spree, wrecked a train on the Dresden-Cottbus line, and scattered a convoy evacuating machinery from Guben."

British Fleet Air Arm Gives Up U.S.-Built Planes

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 4.—Britain's fleet air arm which has done much of its fighting in American built planes is going to switch over to British aircraft, it was reported today, altho the pilots are high in their praise of United States war planes. American Hellcats, Corsairs, and Avengers have been especially praised by the Britons for their performance from British carriers. However, as the British fleet moves toward the far east, aircraft firms in this country are shifting their attention from land based bombers and fighters to types needed in naval operations.

British Farm Tool Firm to Take Over Arms Plant

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 4.—A big arms factory at Doncaster, in Yorkshire, now owned and operated by the government, will be taken over soon by an agricultural machinery firm, it was announced tonight by Evelyn Walkden, Doncaster member of parliament. He said every kind of farming machinery will be needed soon to meet the needs of British agriculture and export markets in Europe and perhaps Russia.

HOW TO CONVERT REAR LINE G. I.s INTO FIGHTERS

5th Army School Takes Only 12 Weeks.

BY CLAY GOWRAN.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

INFANTRY CONVERSION TRAINING CENTER, Italy, March 4.—This vast, sprawling military city, extending over miles of rolling Italian countryside, was built by Mussolini to house and train his arrogant blackshirt divisions. But today Il Duce's barracks—or what's left of them after allied bombings—are being put to a new use.

In line with the war department's new attempt to insure best use of military man power, thousands of soldiers combed from rear echelon and service units of the 5th army are being converted into front line riflemen. Twelve weeks from the day they enter they are ready for the infantry replacement depot behind the 5th army front, from which combat units fill their gaps.

How System Works.

Brig. Gen. Lawrence Jaynes of Columbus, Ga., commanding general of the newly activated replacement and training command, explained how the system operates.

"The high command realized the army was not making full use of the tens of thousands of limited assignment men in the ranks physically unfit for combat," Jaynes said. "At the same time the army had other thousands of fully able-bodied soldiers doing noncombatant duties which the limited assignment men could perform. This training center, and others like it to be established in other theaters, is the answer."

Jaynes explained his command has organized five-man field audit boards which tour all army and air force units other than actual combat infantry, seeking men for conversion. No skilled technicians are taken—only men who can be replaced without losing efficiency of operations.

Teaches His Successor.

When such a man is found, a limited assignment soldier is assigned to his unit. The two work together, the able bodied man teaching the other his duties. When the new man is fully trained, the able bodied man is transferred to infantry conversion school.

Officers of Jaynes' staff said the command was mainly interested in soldiers not over 35 years old, fully qualified physically.

In their weeks here the men concentrate on learning to shoot—and hit—with their rifles, to avoid or neutralize enemy mines, to locate and identify enemy weapons by sound, to handle machine guns, mortars, rifle grenades, hand grenades.

Within 12 hours after leaving the gates, they are in a 5th army replacement depot. Often within 24 hours they are in a front line foxhole.

Learn to Keep Alive.

Most of the men teaching replacements obtained their experience in actual combat. Sixty per cent of the instructors are men with combat experience, but now on limited assignment because they have been wounded or worn out. Some have had as many as 238 days under fire. They teach the hard facts which kept them alive, not the meticulous instructions found in military manuals.

Instruction is keyed with combat operations. If the 5th develops a new patrol tactic, it is included in the instruction, or if the army encounters new enemy tactics, the school teaches how to counteract them. Captured enemy weapons are on the school training grounds, slamming away over the heads of the students to teach them how to identify and locate them.

Lethal Laboratory.

Yesterday I sat on the ground in an open air classroom while German mortar shells exploded on our flank. German rifle grenades slammed in behind us, and German light and heavy machine guns sent bullets crackling overhead. Calmly, the students listened to each weapon, identified it, and pointed out its location. It was like a classroom in hell.

Reds Trap Nazis in Baltic Drive

F. D. R. BETRAYED ALL AT YALTA, POLES CHARGE

More Yielding to Reds Due? They Ask.

By knuckling under to Premier Stalin at the Yalta conference, President Roosevelt betrayed not only Poland, but the hundreds of thousands of Polish-Americans who trusted him to uphold the principles of freedom which have guided America from its earliest days, the Polish Daily Zgoda, an influential Polish newspaper published in Chicago, will say editorially today.

"Yalta," the editorial says, "was nothing more than the complete surrender of President Roosevelt and Premier Churchill to Stalin.

One Sided Compromise.

"President Roosevelt said further that the decisions with respect to Poland were a compromise. If so, the compromise was one sided, for Stalin gained everything. He got all he wanted. He wanted the eastern half of Poland along with Lwow and Wilno and got it. He wanted the oil resources and got them. He wanted recognition of the Lublin committee and got it. He wanted the liquidation of the Polish government and got it. In what, then, lay the compromise?

"It was a sad and bitter disappointment for the Americans of Polish ancestry."

Pointing out that in his report to congress, President Roosevelt indicated that he himself does not believe in the permanency of the Yalta agreements, the editorial observes:

"Peace cannot be built on injustice and humiliation; it cannot be built on dreams nor on violence; it cannot be built on dictatorship."

Forced to Make Excuses.

"When President Roosevelt left for the Yalta conference as the representative of the most powerful country in the world," the editorial continues, "the American nation had reason to believe that its President would defend the principles and honor and noble aims America believed in during the century and a half of her independence. Unfortunately, after his return from the conference, the President, instead of having cause to be proud of the achievements at Crimea, was forced to make excuses for his 'compromise.'

"Since Roosevelt and Churchill yielded to the Russian dictator at Yalta, what assurance is there that that same dictator will not demand new 'compromises,' more yielding, at San Francisco and later at the peace conference, then upon the termination of the war with Japan, then at another occasion?"

Britons Will Supervise Teaching in Axis Schools

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

LONDON, March 5 [Monday].—British men and women school teachers are going to Germany and Japan as educational advisers after the war, the Daily Mail reported this morning. It said the foreign and war offices would select them to watch over schooling in the axis countries to see that it isn't anti-democratic or militaristic.

REP. GORE LEARNS 1ST HAND, AS A PRIVATE, HOW AMG WORKS

SUPREME HDQ. ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCES, Paris, March 4 (AP).—For the last three months Rep. Albert Gore [D., Tenn.] has been on active duty as a private, learning first hand how the allied military government [AMG] operates in occupied Germany, supreme headquarters disclosed tonight.

Rep. Albert Gore.

Over 37, Gore entered active duty at his own request. He took his basic training at Fort Meade, Md., and was ordered to Europe as a replacement. Only a few high ranking officers knew he was a member of congress. The disclosure of the nature of his service came after he had been called to confer with Lt. Gen. W. B. Smith, chief of staff to Gen. Eisenhower, and other staff officers.

Gore worked as a prosecutor in a military government court during his tour of service and also was attached to a spearhead detachment of military government personnel which accompanied regimental combat teams. He frequently was under fire and in the course of an offensive crossed the Ruhr river on a foot bridge with the infantry.

JESUIT PAPER ATTACKS BIG 3 SPLIT OF POLAND

(By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.)

ROME, March 4.—One of the strongest attacks on the Yalta decision on Poland has just appeared in Civita Catholica, a tri-monthly magazine of Rome Jesuits which is regarded as an authoritative ecclesiastical publication altho not an official Vatican organ.

Father Antonio Messineo calls his article "The Shipwreck of the Atlantic Charter" and asserts that as a result of the Polish settlement the charter can no longer inspire faith. Father Messineo asserts that the charter's "shipwreck" was confirmed by its own authors.

"The legitimate Polish government of London, until recently recognized by both London and Washington, has been disavowed by Great Britain and the United States," he wrote, "while the Lublin government—that has no legal basis and was created and recognized by Russia as the opponent of the government in exile is accepted instead."

USRRA SPELLS ONE GRAND LOAF TO WEARY G. I.s

BY DAVID DARRAH.
(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

NICE, France, March 4.—The gilded French Riviera has become a vast G. I. playground—USRRA in army terminology—[United States Riviera recreational area].

Friday the first leave train of 100 American soldiers arrived here from Paris to loll for a week in sunshine around the luxurious Riviera hotels. Other trains will follow until the quota is brought up to thousands who will come and go weekly. At the end of the war it is expected to bring the weekly turnover up to 62,000.

Leave privilege at USRRA is open to all soldiers and officers of the 12th and 6th army groups, and to air borne troops and air forces.

The area is part of an extensive project to ease the strain of waiting for shipping home after the war and also to provide a reward for service.

Plan Will Aid Civilians.

The project also is designed to aid the local population, which was supported mostly by tourist trade—now nonexistent.

The G. I.'s will be concentrated mostly in the luxurious hotels at Nice, and the officers at Cannes. At present, 31 hotels have been requisitioned at Nice, 12 at Cannes, and seven at Antibes. Eventually over 100 hotels, including some at Monte Carlo, will be taken over.

Enlisted men will get the same kind of rooms, meals, and entertainment as the officers. They will be free to do as they please and forget about army discipline.

Chicagoan Directs Fun.

The leave area is under command of Col. Warren Pugh. Director of leave activities is Col. Thomas Gunn, and under him, charged with providing fun, sport, and amusement for the G. I.s as special service officer is Maj. Benjamin Bosley of 515 Briar pl., Chicago.

The major organized sports and recreation in New Caledonia in the Pacific in 1943-'44. They named an athletic field after him on Bougainville. He came to Europe last October. He has a big program of sports, entertainment, and amusement lined up, including several night clubs with good music.

Theaters, circuses, movies, concerts, bathing, dancing, lecture courses, sightseeing, and study of arts and crafts are among the activities open to soldiers. The contract for organizing sightseeing buses has been given the American Express company.

Quarters for WACs.

The men on leave will not be without the society of American girls while there, however, for one hotel is to be turned over to WACs and Red Cross nurses, and Riviera society women also will act as hostesses. The Red Cross will have clubs and provide guides for the soldiers.

A long section of the famed beach at Nice will be staked off for soldiers. Maj. Bosley also has found a lot of bicycles and paddle boats and there are plenty of tennis courts, golf links, and two inside swimming pools.

So far as possible, Col. Gunn said, civilians will be employed around the hotels, so as to give the men as little of any army setting as possible. It is estimated that about 2,000 French civilians will be employed.

One Franc Slot Machines.

The gambling casinos, except Monte Carlo, have been closed down, and the G. I.s will not be permitted to gamble except on one franc limit slot machines in some of the hotels.

Bars in the hotels will be supplied with soft drinks and 4 per cent beer, the standard alcoholic content for army post exchange brew. French girl guides, carefully selected, will be on hand to show the soldiers around or dance with them.

"We believe that we will give the boys such a crowded program of amusement and sport for the whole week that they won't have time to investigate the fleshpots of the Riviera," Col. Gunn said. "They are more likely to tire themselves out on the beaches and dance floors."

FILIPINOS SMASH JAPS CORNERED IN NORTH LUZON

Guerrillas Clear Enemy from One Province.

MANILA, March 5 [Monday]—(AP).—While three Yank divisions pushed steadily against Japanese troops in mountainous northern Luzon, Filipino guerrillas have struck a heavy blow in the enemy's rear, clearing the Nipponese from Ilocos Norte province, Gen. MacArthur announced today.

The campaign to clean the Japanese off Luzon, principal island of the Philippines, also was implemented by the American division's seizure Saturday of Ticao and Burias Islands in the Sibuyan sea.

The occupation of Ticao and Burias will result in the evacuation or destruction of the Nipponese on nearby Bicol peninsula of Luzon Island, MacArthur said.

Possession of Bicol peninsula would give the Americans the key port of Legaspi, on the east side, and additional air bases.

Seize Japs' Last Post.

In Manila, units of the 37th division cleaned out the last of Japanese resistance in the downtown district with capture of the finance building, one of the structures where the Nipponese made suicide stands after the fall of the old walled city to the Yanks.

MacArthur disclosed that guerrillas under Col. R. W. Volckman cleared the Nipponese from Ilocos Norte, in the extreme northwest corner of Luzon, inflicting thousands of casualties while suffering only minor losses themselves.

He described the fighting as of "irregular type which the enemy has been unable to fathom," but gave no further details. A spokesman said the guerrillas were supplied with American arms and since the Yanks arrived in Luzon have been receiving effective air support.

Iowan Trained Natives.

The announcement is the first of a major blow struck by the guerrillas since mid-December when MacArthur reported they had seized control of many areas in the central and southern Philippines.

Volckman was a regular army officer when the Japanese invaded Luzon, and after Bataan fell he trained a well-knit Filipino organization in the north.

MacArthur awarded him the distinguished service cross Feb. 27. His home is at Clinton, Ia.

Severe enemy losses were reported in attacks made against the 6th infantry and 1st cavalry division near Montalban, 13 miles northeast of Manila.

Heavy air strikes were reported in support of ground forces against Japanese strongpoints on Luzon.

American bombers continued their daily attacks on Formosa, destroying 30 enemy planes on the ground and sinking a 7,000 ton freighter-transport. Four American planes were lost to anti-aircraft fire.

Mitchell medium bombers hit a Nipponese air field on the Babuyan Islands north of Luzon.

SEABEES REPAIR IWO AIR FIELD IN THREE DAYS

IWO ISLAND, Feb. 26 [Delayed] —(AP).—This rocky island bastion, on the fringe of the Japanese homeland, already is being whipped into shape by navy Seabees for American use while marines continue their march against fanatical Japanese defenders. The Seabees, who landed within 60 minutes of the first assault wave, have repaired the big southern air field, and marine planes are taking off to give ground forces land based tactical support.

It is only three days since the Seabees went to work on the concrete strip, which had been severely damaged by the retreating enemy's mortar fire.

One Seabee officer, Chief Carpenter George E. Hermansen, 44, of Chicago, related that twice within an hour six companies were hit by direct shell hits from which he escaped unscathed. "I crawled into a shell hole with four marine staff officers and three other men," he said. "Twenty minutes later, we were hit by three shells at once. I was unconscious, I think, for almost an hour. And when I came to, I saw that four of the others had been killed."

22 Nazi U-Boat Experts Die in Experimental Craft

LONDON, March 4 (AP).—Twenty-two of the highest German experts on submarine warfare, including the chief of the 11th flotilla, died two weeks ago when their experimental U-boat was sunk during maneuvers in a fjord near Bergen, Norway, a BBC Stockholm correspondent said today. Sabotage is suspected.

MAJ. GEN. WILLIS H. HALE.

ARMY AIR FORCE HDQ., Guam, March 4 [Via navy radio]—(AP).—Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale has been named to succeeed the missing Lt. Gen. Millard F. Harmon as commander of army air forces, Pacific ocean areas, a headquarters spokesman announced today. Gen. Harmon, native of San Francisco, is missing with nine other officers and men on a trans-Pacific flight. An extended air and naval search is continuing.

Gen. Hale, in addition to commanding army air forces in Pacific ocean areas and Pacific strategic air forces, also assumes Harmon's duties as deputy commander of the Super Fortress 20th air force.

Kansas born Gen. Hale, 52, holds the distinguished service medal for heading the bombing command of the army air force in Hawaii which participated in the battle of Midway, June, 1942. Gen. Hale served with the Philippine constabulary for four years, joining in 1913 after attending Kansas State college. In the first World war he served with the infantry but later transferred to aviation, where his chief interest for more than 20 years has been bombardment aircraft.

CHINESE PUSH TOWARD LOST AIR BASE CITY

CHUNGKING, China, March 4 (AP) —Chinese units which recaptured Yungsin have pushed toward Suichwan, one of the lost Kiangsi province air base cities 45 miles to the south, the Chinese high command announced tonight. The Japanese supply line to Suichwan and the air base city of Kanhsien was severed by the recent Chinese reoccupation of Chaling, Lienhwa, and Yungsin, respectively 60, 90, and 120 miles east of Hengyang.

Now the Chinese are only nine miles from Yuhsien, an enemy-held Hunan province highway town 45 miles east-northeast of Hengyang, the high command said.

In the maritime province of Chekiang, the Japanese column which struck toward Tsingtien, about 20 miles up the Wu river from Yungkia [Wenchow] sustained heavy losses and was forced to retreat, the high command said.

ILLINOIS TROOPS FIGHT ON LUZON FOR 'SHANGRI-LA'

BY GUY RICHARDS.

[Correspondent of the New York News and The Chicago Tribune.]

WITH 130TH INFANTRY REGIMENT IN BENGUET MOUNTAINS, Luzon, March 3 [Delayed].—Here goes an attack on Japanese positions south of Baguio, the Shangri-La of Luzon. Beyond the cool mountain passes ahead is Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita, embittered fox of the Jap 14th army whose plans are a trifle awry for holding on to the rose gardens and giant swimming pool of Luzon's famed resort, tucked behind the 7,000 foot ramparts of Mount Santo Tomas.

Cool breezes are slipping down the Benguet passes. For the last two days these wafts from Yamashita's ice box have caused a stir of excitement in the whole 33d infantry division made up mostly of Illinoisans, commanded by Maj. Gen. Percy W. Clarkson of San Antonio, Tex. Its motto now is "Hell Bent for Heaven."

We are 110 miles northwest of Manila and Baguio is only about 15 miles northeast of us.

Attack Two Ridges.

Today marks our first whacking blow on Benchmark and Question Mark hills, heavily fortified ridges guarding the portals of the Benguet mountains and Bagulo.

For today's attack the spotlight shifts to the 130th regiment, commanded by West Point Graduate Lt. Col. Arthur S. Collins Jr., 29, of Boston. He has decided to make a gamble. He is sending K company, commanded by Capt. Elbert J. Hicks of Hillsville, Va., to take Benchmark hill. If that goes all right he is going to give I company the job of making a late afternoon assault on 1,100 foot Question Mark hill.

At 7 a. m. the 124th field artillery battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. Harold Carlson of Chicago, unloads five minutes' worth of 105 mm. headaches on Benchmark hill. Simultaneously the 210th field artillery tosses the same kind of bouquet to Question Mark hill.

Dead Man's hill, the first fold of Benchmark, is almost taken. Capt. Hicks thinks he can reorganize for a final assault at noon. Collins tells him to go ahead.

At noon Hicks has reorganized and his men start up the slope. Bayonets flash. It's close hand-to-hand and grenade stuff now. The Japs throw some of the grenades back.

"Throw That Back."

One G. I. has two thrown back at him. He holds the third for two seconds, then throws it and shouts:

"Now throw that one back."

The Jap tries it, but it explodes in his hand and that's the end of him.

At 3:30 Hicks radios that the hill has been taken. The company has 42 casualties, including 13 dead.

Now Col. Collins decides on a gamble. He radios I company, commanded by slim, red haired Capt. Alan J. Kennedy of Portland, Ore., to go ahead and take Question Mark hill right now.

Three knolls are passed, but the fourth and last is too much. I company finds itself against two companies of Japs and Collins orders it to withdraw one knoll and dig in.

Our artillery opens up again and Collins orders: "Tell Kennedy to keep I company's head down and we will keep the Japs' heads down."

Now plans are made for a whole battalion to take the last 100 yards of Question Mark that Kennedy's company couldn't take.

INDIANS DRIVE WITHIN 30 MILES OF MANDALAY

KANDY, Ceylon, March 4 (AP).—Troops of the 19th Indian division, driving on Mandalay from the north, have occupied a village 30 miles above that Burmese city and 10 miles south of the Singu bridgehead over the Irrawaddy river, allied headquarters announced today.

British 14th army troops continued expanding their Irrawaddy bridgehead 30 miles west of Mandalay against stubborn opposition.

Policy Calls for Speed by Allies, Says Lanza.

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

The policy of avoiding major engagements in the Philippines, and limiting the Japanese to efforts to prolong the war for as long as possible, probably came from Tokyo. It does not agree with the statements of Gen. Yamashita in the Philippines last autumn. His viewpoint then was to fight it out on the battle field. Altho he lost, he certainly followed his own ideas on Leyte. The change of policy appears to be due to the general strategical situation of Japan, rather than to local theaters of operation.

The population of Japan is roughly equal to that of Germany. Japan has noted that the three greatest powers in the world have had a hard time crushing Germany. That war is now in its sixth year.

Japan considers that its own strategical situation is immensely superior. The primary reason for the present unfavorable situation of Germany is that enormous Russian armies have been able to attack her overland. A large part of the Russian-German border is open plain.

Japanese Situation Different.

Nothing similar exists in Japan. She can be reached only by sea. Her home islands are unusually mountainous. If it takes the allies six years to conquer Germany how long will it take to conquer Japan, which has just as large and fanatical a population?

In June, 1942, after the battles of the Coral sea and Midway, and later that year, after the campaign of Guadalcanal, Japan realized that command of the sea and of the air in the Pacific had passed to the United States. She has never since hoped to equal the vast naval power of America, much less when combined with the British navy. She has believed that she had a chance to gradually build up an air force which might eventually compete with the strong air fleets of the allies. For that she needed time.

The bombing of Japanese cities was foreseen. Steps to meet this were initiated in 1942. After more than two years, Japanese industry has been increased and spread out.

Campaign in China.

The major political aim of Japan for some time has been to consolidate the Chinese people for a common war against the white races, on an Asia for the Asiatics slogan. But the cruelty of Japan in China has operated against her. The Chinese people have come to detest the Japanese. Japan has not had much success. Nevertheless, she is continuing with her efforts to convince China that her best course of action is to join in a common cause with Japan. At the same time she is consolidating her position in China.

Japan feels that she cannot prevent a landing of the allies in Japan, but can defeat it with the vast numbers of men at her disposal. When and if that happens she expects that the allies will land in China, and attempt to attack Japan from that side.

To meet this, Japan has large armies already in China.

Hopes to Last Long Time.

Considering the industrial resources of China, and her enormous population, coupled with that of Japan, the Japanese government believes that it can keep the war going indefinitely, provided that the Chinese people will help.

With this end in view, Japan will support her troops in the Philippines, and in other detached posts, as she has been doing. She has an efficient submarine barge fleet, which in spite of the American air and sea blockade, does get by to even her most distant troops, which are in the Marshall Islands, and supplies munitions. Food is obtained locally.

For the allies, their best policy is to push matters and get down quickly to the main event.

Brothers Have Reunion at Home

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

The reunion of Pvt. Robert Wolford (carving), and Tech. Sgt. Otto Wolford, with their mother, Mrs. Gladys Backmann, found little brother, Ronnie, 5, an eager watcher of the dinner preparations.

Edward Olsen (left) and Henry Olsen, who met three times in the Pacific area, meet again at their mother's home.

IWO'S VOLCANO ACTS UP, HEATS MARINE RATIONS

Yanks Put Food Cans in Steaming Cracks.

IWO ISLAND, March 4 [Via navy radio] —(AP).—Suribachi volcano, on the southern tip of Iwo, acted up a bit today and as a result American marines in that sector had hot rations for the first time in several days.

During the night the 560 foot cone began erupting hot sulfurous steam from hundreds of little fissures on the northern slope.

"It didn't take the boys long to get wise," said Capt. E. R. McCarthy of Medford, Mass., commanding officer of a weapons company. "They began shoving cans of rations into the cracks and in 15 minutes took them out piping hot."

Japs Scurry Out of Caves.

McCarthy said an unusual number of Japanese were observed scuttling out of volcanic caves in the early morning and he speculated that sulfur fumes might have driven them into the open.

A huge, gray cloud envelops the summit of Suribachi on which the American flag was planted Feb. 24 after a frontal assault by marines.

Lt. Harold C. Blair of Tottenville, N. Y., observation pilot, reported after a dawn flight that "smoke is billowing from the crater and from smaller holes around the summit. The crater itself, which has been a gray brown, has taken on a greenish tinge and the edges are rimmed in black. I couldn't detect flame or lava flow."

Japs Get Rain Water.

There is still a force of the 5th marine division on the mountain. These Leathernecks have been flushing Japanese diehards out of caves since the Yanks took control of the sector.

On the other side of the ledger nature gave the Nipponese a lift today when heavy rain fell during the morning. The Japanese apparently were short of water, as several cisterns and storage basins were wrecked by American shells.

One marine officer said that rain which has fallen thus far today has given the enemy enough water for three days.

Flies 50 Missions

Robert and Otto Wolford met yesterday at the home of their mother, Mrs. Gladys Backman, 5010 N. Washtenaw av., for a reunion after 33 months. Robert, 20, is a marine private who served 29 months in the Southwest Pacific, and received two Purple Hearts. Tech. Sgt. Otto, 22, is with the army air forces in Italy and flew 50 missions as a gunner in four months.

At the home of Mrs. Hanna Olsen, 80, at 5306 Belle Plaine av., Edward and Henry Olsen met on furlough, too, but they had met by chance three times in the last year in the Pacific. Edward, 42, who is an electrician's mate first class, and Henry, 45, who is a chief carpenter's mate, were sworn into the navy together in August, 1942.

Edward served on a carrier at Saipan, Guam, Palau, and Lingayen Gulf Luzon, while Henry served in the Admiralty and New Hebrides groups. Another brother, Arnold, 49, served in the Hebrides and Australia with the Red Cross. Henry served in the army in 1918 as did two other brothers, William, 44, and Rolf, 47, to give Mrs. Olsen three sons in service in each war.

Belgian Woman and 2 Men Sentenced to Die as Spies

BRUSSELS, March 4 (AP).—Three Belgian spies, including a couple who specialized in delivering escaped allied war prisoners back to their German captors, have been sentenced to death, it was announced today. They are Jules Renauart, 38, his mistress, Marie Simoens, 29, and Jan Josef Schmidt, 23, who was charged with planning to send information to the enemy and carry out sabotage.

AMERICANS WIN BURMA NATIVES WITH KINDNESS

BY ALFRED WAGG.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

WITH U. S. ANTI-AIRCRAFT UNITS NEAR MANDALAY, Burma, March 4.—In the yard of an old Burmese home today G. I. Joes stood and grinned and stared at the dark, supple bodies of Burmese dancers weaving and turning to the haunting beat of native drums. It was incongruous to see American uniforms in the midst of Burma's thick, dank jungles.

These ack-ack troops, commanded by Lt. Col. Robert S. Watterson Jr., are here to protect American units of flying jeep ambulance planes evacuating the wounded, and protect American combat cargo squadrons flying in supplies to the Mandalay front. American troops in Burma today are in action on the southernmost flank southwest of Mandalay, on the Chindwin river, at one point less than 20 miles from Mandalay itself.

Native Child Healed.

Col. Watterson's fighters have adopted an 8 year old, sickly native child who literally was on the point of death. The child's family pleaded with the Americans for help, the boys saw the child, were touched, and called in their medical officer, Capt. John B. Terry, Holly Grove, Ark., who treated the child.

The child, a fair faced Burmo-Chinese girl, had been tubercular for over eight months and then had developed pneumonia. Johnny Terry Sahib got busy and Rose Leaf—the English translation of her name—will soon get well.

The job of G. Is here has been one of the most monotonous conceivable, with reading matter months old before it reaches them. But like most American troops they have managed to make friends with the natives. For instance, the chief chow slinger, Pvt. Matthew J. Adinolfi of De Kalb st., Chicago, who crashed into Burmese society, received a pigeon blood ruby as a token of esteem from the natives.

Jap Trophy Hunt.

This coast artillery unit has had a complete assortment of experiences from attacks from the air to Japanese counter-attacks against its perimeter. Front line duty as ground troops is also part of the job of these ack-ack men. A few nights ago they threw off several Japanese patrols.

The other day a few of the boys took a busman's holiday and visited the Irrawaddy beachhead front. They were personally greeted by Maj. Gen. Thomas "Dagger Pete" Rees, commander of the Indian 19th army division, who directed them on a trophy hunt which netted several Jap helmets, and smashed mortars.

CEILING PRICES OPENLY IGNORED IN PHILIPPINES

Overcharges Up to 2,000 Percent.

BY WALTER SIMMONS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

MANILA, P. I., March 1 [Delayed].—A Tribune survey of the liberated portions of Luzon today showed ceiling prices set up by the Philippines government still were being widely ignored, nearly two months after the original landings of Jan. 9.

Prices were returned approximately to pre-war levels by President Sergio Osmena in an executive order dated Nov. 6. At the same time, the wage for common labor was established at one peso, 25 centavos daily. [The peso is pegged at 50 cents.]

2,000 Per Cent Overcharge.

Here are the more representative ceiling prices: rice, 32 centavos per ganta [about 2½ pounds]; eggs, 36 centavos a dozen; bananas, one centavo each; chicken, depending on size, from 25 centavos to one peso, 20 centavos each.

In Manila, a Tribune reporter in round of public markets found overcharges ranging up to 2,000 per cent of ceiling prices. When vendors were reminded of the government price schedule, they merely shrugged indifferently. They did not seem concerned when the reporter openly took notes of the prices asked.

Here are a few typical prices in Manila today: a medium sized chicken, 10 pesos; eggs, 40 to 50 centavos each [this is a drop from the standard 1 peso price quoted last week]; bananas, 20 centavos each; rice, from 2 pesos 30 to 2 pesos 50 centavos per ganta.

American cigarets are widely displayed at prices ranging from one and a half to two and a half pesos per pack.

Liquor at $8.

Investigating liquor prices, the reporter received quotations of from $8 to $10 for a sealed bottle of first quality product. Unsealed bottles are cheaper—if you want to take a chance.

In a Chinese restaurant, the proprietor asked four and a half pesos for a meal consisting of noodles mixed with pork and vegetables, with a cup of tea on the side. The reporter paid 2 pesos and walked out.

On a business trip to Dagupan, on the original Lingayen gulf beachhead, a Tribune representative found eggs quoted at three for 1 peso in a public market. Bananas were 10 centavos each, and small green tomatoes were two for 5 centavos, as against a ceiling of two for 1 centavo. Camotes, the native sweet potatoes, were quoted correctly, however, at 50 centavos for a five gallon can.

Chickens $12.50.

At Tarlac, half way to Manila, eggs were 50 centavos apiece, and chickens were a flat 25 pesos. The Tribune learned many G. Is had been paying these prices without question.

At San Fernando, a Filipino asked $15 for a quart of whisky. A check-up disclosed the sale price was almost identical with that in Tarlac.

The army's Philippine affairs units have been unable to do much in the way of price ceiling enforcement because of limited personnel and the more pressing problem of civilian relief. In the final analysis, too, enforcement is up to the Philippine government itself.

'Fringe' Boosts May Balk Fight with Lewis.

Ask Mine Seizure

New York, March 4 (AP).—Declaring that John L. Lewis was formulating a "strike plot against the nation," representatives of 600,000 CIO workers called upon President Roosevelt today to proclaim a national emergency "and take over the [coal] mines of America."

At a conference on "political action for 60 million jobs," sponsored by the greater New York CIO council, 1,800 shop stewards asserted in a resolution that an interruption of coal mining at this point of the war "cannot and must not be tolerated."

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

Washington, D. C., March 4.—A move that may avert a repetition of the administration's ill fated collisions with John L. Lewis in the coal mine strikes of 1943 materialized today.

John L. Lewis.

The administration, it was learned, is considering a revision of price and wage stabilization policy under which "fringe" wage raises would be allowed even if such increases should raise prices or production costs. Lewis' current wage raise demands on behalf of the United Mine Workers, of which he is president, fall chiefly in the fringe classification.

In a class by itself is Lewis' demand for 10 cents a ton royalty, which is comparable to James Caesar Petrillo's exactions of the phonograph recording companies on behalf of the musicians' federation. Petrillo obtained and has maintained his royalty in defiance of the war labor board and of President Roosevelt himself.

Begin Parleys Today.

Lewis and the mine operators are to begin closed negotiations of a new wage agreement tomorrow. The operators are strongly opposed to the royalty demand not only because it would necessitate a boost in the price of coal but because they regard it wholly unjustified in principle. They are prepared to consider the fringe wage demands.

The administration plan under consideration would break the deadlock between the war labor board and Economic Stabilization Director Vinson over wage raises that cause price boosts and pave the way to fringe wage advances for textile and meat packing workers already approved by the WLB as well as easing the situation produced by Lewis' demands.

Follows Steel Policy.

Under the proposed revision, limits would be set for pay differentials for second and third shifts, vacation pay, and reclassification of scheduled wage rates within an industry. It was suggested that maximum premium pay to be allowed for shifts might be 4 cents an hour for a second shift and 6 cents for the third, as given steel workers recently. Vacations with pay probably would be limited to one week for a year's service, two weeks after five years.

WLB would be given authority under the plan to grant increases within the "limits" without approval of Mr. Vinson, even where industry requested price relief and the office of price administration held an increase necessary to absorb the wage adjustment.

The administration has no stomach for another tussle with Lewis such as that of 1943 when it came off second best.

Four Strikes in Year.

Mr. Lewis' miners struck four times in that year before the war labor board, acting under what Sen. Wayne Morse, then one of its members, called "economic" pressure on the government, approved the contract made by the secretary of the interior, Harold L. Ickes, and Mr. Lewis by which the pitmen got most of their original demands. They had asked for an increase of $2 a day, and they emerged with something between $1.50 and $1.75. The period of controversy, which resulted in the loss to the country of more than 17,000,000 tons of coal left in the ground, lasted from May to early November.

The miners began to lay off work in April, returned and left again, and after two more strikes in June Mr. Lewis agreed to a working truce until Oct. 31 on the proviso that the government should operate the mines of which it had only taken custody. If this operation ceased before Oct. 31 the strike was automatically on again, he announced.

Illinois Miners Helped.

During the first all-out strike the President got radio time in which to demand that the workers return to the mines after a two day stoppage. Twenty minutes before Mr. Roosevelt was to speak, Mr. Lewis called off the strike. But then came another which lasted four days, and two more followed in the course of the controversy.

After months of jockeying Mr. Lewis' union signed a contract with the Illinois operators which added $1.50 to their daily earnings and took into account the time spent in what has become known as "portal-to-portal" travel. The WLB scaled this down to $1.12½ on the ground that any more would break the anti-inflation statute. But by November the Ickes-Lewis contract had supplied the other 37½ cents a day thru the device of cutting down the miners' lunch hour by fifteen minutes.

Justify the Boost.

The WLB, embarrassed by the fact that by the President's direction another government official was co-signer of the contract, decreed that in this fifteen minutes enough more coal would be mined to justify the extra 37½ cents and maintain the stabilization law.

Despite repeated official statements that there would be no wage settlement by the government while the strike was on, Ickes made one. The miners went back to work in November. Lewis had successfully defied the authority of the board in wage disputes. By taking advantage of two conflicting Presidential directives, he had chosen that part of the government with which he would treat, stated his terms and fixed his deadlines.

Convicts Test Malaria Remedies

Two Stateville prison convicts (in beds) await malarial infection from New Guinea mosquitoes. Capt. Theo Pullman takes pulse of one while Warden Joseph Ragen looks on.

(TRIBUNE Photos.)

A life term prisoner takes malaria drug after infection. With him are Capt. Branch Craig Jr., Capt. Pullman, and Warden Ragen.

Volunteer for Tests

Malaria tests among 100 Stateville prison convicts who volunteered as human guinea pigs have reached the innoculation stage. The convicts have been bitten by disease carrying mosquitoes brought from New Guinea, where malaria has plagued American fighters.

The convicts, among whom are some of the most notorious and desperate criminals of other days, know that they will contract the disease if atabrine, a war developed synthetic drug, and other medicines they were given previously are not completely preventative. They volunteered in spite of the warning that death may be the outcome of their contributions to science.

The tests, aimed at discovery of a substitute for quinine, are conducted by the board for the coördination of malarial studies, which includes representatives of the army, navy, United States public health, the office of scientific research and development, and the National Research council.

15 UNION MEN JAILED IN ROW OF CIO UNITS

Fifteen members of the United Farm Equipment Workers' union surrendered yesterday to Capt. George Barnes of the police labor detail on warrants charging them with assault and battery. The warrants were obtained by two members of the rival United Automobile Workers' union which is seeking to enlist workers in International Harvester company plants. Both are CIO unions.

Harry Devereux and James J. Garvey, UAW members who procured the warrants, testified they were attacked last week because of their organizational efforts. Devereux claimed he was assaulted by 10 men in the locker room of the tractor plant. Garvey said he suffered a broken nose when five men beat him up Thursday at the Oakley av. gate of the McCormick works. Those arrested:

Jack Hymers, 41, 3515 Carroll av., president of local 109 of the UFEW; Tony Matusak, 39, 5129 S. Menard av.; Fred Moore, 41, Negro, 311 E. 60th st.; Anthony Cavaree, 44, 3250 Polk st.; Stanley Zubek, 37, 4313 S. Maplewood av.; Kenneth Wall, 37, Negro, 5732 Indiana av.; Paul Korman Jr., 35, 2706 W. 24th st.; Pleas Kellogg, 43, Negro, 703 E. 44th st.; Joseph Slusser, 40, 2721 Ederiane av., Franklin Park; Zigmund Zaleski, 45, 3137 Medill av.; Frank Bishopperger, 42, 2030 Armitage av.; Robert Slezak, 41, 3523 S. 59th av., Cicero; Edward Grabowski, 29, 5354 Aberdeen st.; Thomas Hahn, 36, 3541 Carroll av., and Paul B. Biccgila, 37, 4349 S. Komensky av.

All are employed by the Harvester company. They will be arraigned in South State st. court tomorrow morning when cases against Hahn and three others, arrested for disorderly conduct during an earlier outbreak of violence, will be heard.

Pastors Tell of Red Cross and Ask Support in Drive

Every day is an opening performance for KITTY GARRETT!

As wardrobe mistress to a large cast dramatizing the spic and span grooming of the Stouffer Girl, Kitty Garrett is always in the midst of a pre-performance rush that rivals Broadway on opening day! Yet she manages it all quickly . . . with smiles that are fully as good morale builders as the spotless uniforms she hands out!

She and other Stouffer wardrobe mistresses have no easy job these days! They have to keep things moving to give busy laundries all the cooperation they can. New uniforms are as scarce as new shirts, thus sewing machines must hum at full speed to keep up with repairs and the alterations needed for new girls. Yet despite all these problems and all the sorting several hundred uniforms require, our wardrobe mistresses do a commendable job of producing fresh changes on the dot.

Stouffer Girls take such intense pride in their reputation for good grooming that they hold informal "inspections" before every meal period... give each other the "once-over" to make sure no inharmonious detail mars their neat appearance. It's a pride our wardrobe mistresses share. Daily they perform near-miracles to make sure that reputation is maintained. That's why they personally feel so pleased when our guests say, "Your girls are always a delight to the eye!"

LEGION DEFINES UNAMERICANISM TO GUIDE PROBE

Foes of U. S. System of Government Included.

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—Any one who in the last 10 years advocated the violent overthrow of the American type of government should get a congressional grilling, the American Legion said today.

Parallel views were expressed by the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

Representatives of both organizations wrote Rep. Mundt [R., S. D.] at his request detailing the types of organizations they think should be investigated by the house committee on un-American activities.

Mundt, a member of the committee, wrote 100 prominent individuals and organizations recently seeking their definitions of un-Americanism.

Legion Details Views.

The American Legion, in a statement from H. L. Chailaux, director of its Americanism commission, listed:

Those who have stood for the use of violence to destroy our form of government any time in the last 10 years.

Foreign controled organizations dominated by fascist or nazi philosophies.

So-called "native Fascist organizations."

Advocates of "social revolution."

Groups which "prey upon racial and religious angles as a medium to build intolerance and hatred against blocs of American people."

Peace Outfits Included.

So-called peace organizations "international in origin and international in present affiliation."

The Veterans of Foreign Wars classified as un-American suspect any person or organization which:

Engages in activities "designed to destroy or challenge the American form of representative government."

Tries to obtain military or economic advantage for a foreign nation.

Spread statements "designed to incite individuals and groups against constitutional authority and statutory law."

Seeks to "deprive individuals or groups of their constitutional rights because of racial or religious prejudice."

Seeks to "influence or control racial or religious groups thru misleading information and promises of advantages which are in excess of constitutional rights."

Offers or seeks preferences for aliens over citizens.

THE QUESTION.

What characteristics of your own do you want your child to have?

WHERE ASKED.

Lobby of Michael Reese hospital.

THE ANSWERS.

Nick Frank, grocer, 672 Western av., Lake Forest—I want my son to be just as stubborn and willful as I am—have the same general cussedness that I possess. And, of course, like myself, I want him to be a good sport, and have a pleasant disposition. I want those blue eyes of his to turn grey like mine.

Edward Ehrlich, polisher, 7425 Colfax st.—When I was younger I was a good basketball player, and I hope my son carries on in my steps in sports of all kinds. I want him always to know that fair play and good sportsmanship are important. Most important I want him at all times to be in all respects a good son.

N. W. Kanter, service station operator, 4509 Woodlawn av.—It's so much easier to say the many ways in which I wouldn't want him to be like me. I hope, however, he's musically inclined and enjoys the piano—I don't know if the neighbors will agree with me. I want him to be generous but not to let people run over him.

M. Johns, salesman, 1424 Winnemac av.—Hummn, well, a good appetite like mine keeps me healthy and ambitious. That's not a bad trait to wish on any one. Foresight and ability to judge people's character are other assets I'd like him to have. Then I hope he's helpful, obedient, kind, and thoughtful.

Morris Miller, auto radiator specialist, 1356 Estes av.—Generally I don't want him to have any of my characteristics. I only hope he's as healthy and keeps himself as physically fit as has become almost a tradition with me. I haven't been sick for over 20 years. Hard work, regular hours, no liquor or cigarets will do it.

Irwin Block, student, 2844 Wallace st.—Naturally, I want him to be an honest, upright, citizen, interested in education and advancement. I hope, too, he's clever and intelligent. I've always tried to cooperate with people and live peaceably with them. If he turns out to be as easy going as I am I'll be happy.

FURNACE SLAYER OF WOMAN GIVES SEX AS MOTIVE

A sex motive was given last night by Joseph Nischt, 30, janitor, for the slaying of Mrs. Rose Michaelis, 58, a tenant, whose body he confessed he thrust into the furnace of the apartment building at 6855 Clyde av.

After he had been questioned by police in an attempt to shake his composure and learn a motive for the crime, Nischt told Assistant State's Atty. Blair Varnes that his attack upon Mrs. Michaelis Wednesday night was impelled by sexual desire. Nischt said he struck her when she repulsed him and cried, "Let me go!" He said he did not rape her before he thrust her into the fire.

Confronted by Family.

Earlier, police confronted the lanky prisoner with the victim's husband and daughter. In his original confession made Saturday he had given as his reason for the attack "an urge to hurt some one while crazy drunk."

Asked by the husband, Milton, what he had done with Mrs. Michaelis' body, Nischt replied indifferently:

"I stuffed her into the furnace."

When the daughter, Mrs. Pearl Weiss, 5111 Dorchester av., became hysterical, Nischt asked that they forgive him.

Ashes to Be Tested.

Meantime a police detail was guarding a roped off section of a slough near Hammond, where ashes taken from the apartment by a scavenger service were hauled Thursday. Several cans of clinkers and ashes removed from the furnace following the confession will be subjected to scientific tests at the crime laboratory in the hope of finding traces of human bone or of gold from the victim's wedding ring.

Several pieces of bone recovered from the furnace have been found not to be of human origin, Chief of Detectives Storms disclosed, altho Prof. Wilton M. Krogman of the University of Chicago, an anatomist and anthropologist who is assisting in that phase of the investigation, Saturday said one of the fragments might be part of a woman's foreafm.

Mrs. Michaelis disappeared Wednesday evening when she left home to get a jug of filtered water from the city filter plant four blocks away.

Seized by police Nischt admitted he once had been arrested for assaulting a woman. He was released but newspaper accounts of his arrest brought forth the information from the wife of another janitor that Nischt had told her husband he had killed a woman, and sought her husband's aid.

PAN AMERICAN PARLEY FACES 3 MORE HURDLES

MEXICO CITY, March 4 (AP).—The inter-American conference moved today to fill in the last remaining blanks in a new and mutual good neighbor policy—supported by the force of 20 nations.

The three important subjects on which delegates have yet to express their final views are Argentina, Dumbarton Oaks, and an economic charter for the Americas. Indications are that all three will be disposed of smoothly.

A statement on Argentina is expected tomorrow. Little has been done on Dumbarton Oaks, because Secretary of State Stettinius hopes to be able to announce the Yalta formula for voting in the projected security council before the open discussions. Clearance of the economic charter for the Americas was held up by debate over a formula for United States purchases of Latin-American raw materials during the transition from war to peace.

F. D. R. ASSURES VANDENBERG OF PARLEY FREEDOM

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—President Roosevelt has assured Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.] of freedom of action at the world security conference, April 25, in San Francisco, and Vandenberg is expected to accept an invitation to become a delegate. The conference is intended to formally set up the Dumbarton Oaks peace machinery.

An authoritative source said today the President's assurances that there are no strings attached to service on the American delegation to the San Francisco meeting, were conveyed in a letter to the chairman of the senate Republican conference.

Vandenberg, who has declined comment, reportedly told friends he will make an announcement of his position early this week. That announcement is expected to signal his acceptance of a place on the United States delegation of eight.

HOME LOOTED BY BURGLARS.

SOLDIERS MOVE FOOD AS LONDON DOCKERS STRIKE

(Chicago Tribune Press Service.)

LONDON, March 4.—As 1,000 British soldiers took their places to keep supplies moving to the western front and to save the British capital's food supplies from spoiling, 7,000 to 9,000 striking London dock workers today were urged by union officials to return to work immediately. After day-long parleys between union and strike leaders, it was expected the men would be back on the docks Tuesday at the latest.

While most of the dock workers were believed agreeable to the union's promise that their grievances would be aired, more than 500 East End laborers voted to continue their strike.

The walkout started Thursday when the men expressed resentment over moving of the hut where they sign in for work from some 70 yards outside the dock gates to just inside them, which was believed aimed at curtailing absenteeism by workers who did not go into the docks after reporting.

A public rally in commemoration of the 95th birthday of T. G. Masaryk, first president of the Czechoslovak republic, was held yesterday in Sokol hall, 2612 S. Speakers said seven years have passed since Masaryk was buried in Lan , but that his spiritual heritage still is a source of hope and courage to every Czechoslovak. Louis Divina, 2629 S. 108½ HOUR WEEK IN WAR PLANTS, JAPANESE GOAL

Plans Cited to Indicate Need for U. S. Arms.

In an effort to increase the production of war goods, the Japanese workers in Tokyo war plants have set themselves to a work schedule of 108½ hours per week, Domei, the Japanese news agency, announced in a broadcast intercepted by the federal communications commission.

Thru the long work week—from 7:30 a. m. to 11 p. m., seven days a week—the Japs hope to increase their production by 80 per cent, the broadcast said.

If such a schedule is achieved and maintained, an army officer said yesterday, the war in the Pacific will be prolonged indefinitely and American casualties will be far greater.

Promises Held Out to Japs.

The Japanese soldiers and workers are much more poorly paid and equipped than the American soldier, the officer said, but their standards of living are also far below that of the United States. However, he said, the average Japanese worker has been allowed a glimpse of western standards and has been told that all the occidental advantages will be his if Japan wins the war.

Because it is essential that American soldiers in the Pacific be given enough equipment to smash Japanese production, rather than allow it to increase that 80 per cent, THE TRIBUNE, radio station W-G-N, the Aluminum Company of America, and seven other vital war plants tonight will present the fifth program in the series, America Unlimited.

Depicts Roles of Workers.

The show, presented in coöperation with the army, navy, and war agencies, is designed to tell each war worker the part he plays on the battle front, and to inform workers not in war production why they must find a war job.

The products of the Aluminum Company of America are particularly important in the Pacific war because their light weight decreases transportation problems. The story of the multitude of products coming from the huge furnaces of the aluminum company's plants in Chicago and Lafayette, Ind., will be told tonight from 9 to 9:30 over W-G-N.

Programs on Monday Nights.

On subsequent Monday nights the story of the Electro-Motive division of General Motors, the Western Electric company, the Buda company, and Hallicrafters company will be dramatized on the series, presented each week at the same hour.

Tonight's program was written and will be directed by Jack Lafrandre. Original music was composed by Robert Trendler, who will direct the orchestra and chorus.

WILL HAYS, ON NEW YORK TRIP, PAUSES IN CITY

Will Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, and Mrs. Hays arrived in Chicago's Dearborn station yesterday on the Santa Fe Super Chief on their way to New York from Hollywood, Cal. Hays said he was returning from his annual business trip to the west coast. Also on the train was Jack Holt, movie actor, on his way to Miami, Fla., from Hollywood for the filming of backgrounds for his forthcoming picture, "They Were Expendable," in which he has one of the principal roles.

PARIS, March 4 (AP).—France has not been invited to participate in the conferences of the United States, Russian, and British foreign ministers arranged at the Yalta meeting, a spokesman for the French foreign office said today.

"I know nothing at all about it," he said.

$100,000 CARGO OF PENICILLIN TO ARRIVE BY AIR

Police Guard Ordered for Miracle Drug.

A hundred thousand dollar shipment of penicillin, the miracle drug, was scheduled to arrive on an American Airlines air freight plane at Chicago airport early today for distribution thru Chicago outlets. It comprises part of a 6,000 pound shipment sent from New York by E. R. Squibb & Sons, drug manufacturers. Another delivery wil be made at Los Angeles, Cal.

The largest single shipment of the precious new medicine ever to arrive in Chicago will be guarded by a squad of police in charge of Lt. Orin Ross of the cartage detail.

Asks for Police Guard.

J. F. Martin Jr., vice president of the John F. Martin Cartage company, 712 S. Racine av., which specializes in transfer of drug shipments, said he requested the police guard while his trucks make the transfer. He said the guard would escort the trucks when they leave the airport.

The special plane was scheduled to leave the New York airport at 10 o'clock last night, and arrive here at 2:26 a. m. today.

It was estimated that 6,000 pounds of the drug represents enough to save 5,000 lives.

Release Expected Soon.

Officials of the Squibb company said that action by the WPB to permit general civilian use of the drug appears imminent, and that it was desired to have adequate on-the-spot supplies on hand in all sections of the nation. Other sources said the WPB order was expected to be issued about March 10.

Due to its scarcity and its remarkable curative effects, penicillin became a vital military need, and its earlier use was limited to members of the armed services. Last September the drug was made available to hospitals for civilian use in emergency cases.

LAWRENCE F. STERN NAMED CHAIRMAN IN 7TH WAR BOND DRIVE

Lawrence F. Stern.

Lawrence F. Stern, president of the American National Bank and Trust company of Chicago, yesterday was appointed chairman of the 7th war loan campaign in Chicago and Cook county by Renslow P. Sherer, head of the war finance committee of Illinois. Stern already has begun organization of approximately 100,000 volunteer workers in the fields of business and the professions and among civic organizations. The opening of the drive has been scheduled unofficially for May 14.

BURGLARS FAN TEAR GAS FROM A FANCY SAFE

The burglarproof safe in the office of the Kennedy Laundry company, 1625 W. 9th av., Gary, was even equipped with a mechanism which released a flood of tear gas if any one sought to tamper with it.

So three cracksmen who entered the laundry and bound the watchman, Paul Alston, 47, of 2333 Massachusetts st., Gary, early yesterday, opened the window, placed an electric fan on the floor to blow the gas away, then pulled out the combination. They escaped with several hundred dollars from the safe and $100 from a filing cabinet.

Upon leaving, they tossed a $10 bill to Alston, who later freed himself and called police.

OPA TO SLASH EXTRA GASOLINE FOR VOLUNTEERS

Effective Friday, extra gasoline allowances for volunteer workers for some organizations will be cut off because of limited supplies, James F. Riley Jr., acting director of the office of price administration in the Chicago area, said yesterday.

Eligibility, Riley said, would be narrowed down to include those in certain activities of social service, government agencies contributing to the war effort or general welfare, government agencies or other organizations engaged in aiding discharged war veterans and their families, ministers serving religious needs of their communities and labor, management, or government workers who train and recruit industrial workers or serve in labor relations.

Riley said the OPA has recognized the importance of many volunteer activities since rationing was initiated, but explained conditions make it imperative to curtail many uses of gasoline no longer deemed justified.

Colossus plans a home

MEET the American giant who has right now, in the bank, ready for spending, some 12½ billion dollars . . . who enjoyed last year an income of close to 28 billion dollars.

The American Farmer!

Come peace, he'll be ready and eager to buy all the things that wartime conditions have denied him. Especially, a new home!

A new survey* of the nation's better-able-to-buy farm families, just completed for Country Gentleman, reveals that 17% plan to build all-new homes—and almost ⅔ of these have already set aside the funds. 72% plan to repair or remodel their present homes. 74% expect to repair or build other farm structures. And 68% intend to spend an average of $271 on household appliances.

When you consider what this all means in terms of plumbing, wiring, paint, glass, wallpaper, hardware, fixtures and a hundred-odd other home-making items, you get a glimpse of a colossal consumer market that is absolutely vital to victory, and whose prosperity is essential to the prosperity of all.

Maybe colossal is too puny a word for this giant on whom rests the awesome responsibility of feeding our own population . . . our armed forces . . . our fighting allies . . . and the newly-liberated nations of the world.

1,044 G. I. GRAVES MARK 1,044 MILE ROUTE TO CHINA

Washington, D. C., March 4 (AP).—For every mile on the 1,044 mile Ledo road from India to China, there's a grave of an American soldier.

Disclosure of the cost in lives of building the strategic route was made by the war department today. Negro troops formed 65 per cent of more than 15,000 soldiers in the construction forces.

Only 42 miles of the road—which took two years to build—lay across friendly territory—and even there malaria and other diseases took their toll. Further on the Japanese were a still greater menace.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

MOSCOW'S TANTRUMS.

The soviet army newspaper Red Star has made an intemperate attack upon Polish groups in the United States who have spoken out against the partitioning of Poland and the activities of Stalin's stooge government in Lublin. Red Star says these groups have been supported by THE TRIBUNE, the Hearst publications, and other "newspaper gangsters" not named.

This piece of propaganda was put out on the same day that the Polish government in exile at London announced that the wife of the London government's prime minister, Mme. Tomasz Arciszewski, had been seized in Poland by the Russian political police. In Belgrade, Ilija Mihailovitch, former president of the Yugoslavian parliament, was on trial before a military court on charges brought by Tito's Communists that he had committed "crimes against the people," specifically having aided Gen. Mihailovitch's Chetniks in their struggle against the Nazis.

No eminent person in the countries overrun by Russia is safe. Eminence, indeed, will lead to the loss of their liberty, if not their lives. Those who are beyond the reach of the soviet political police cannot be molested directly, but the Moscow propaganda machine can do its best to smear them. American publishers are not the only ones who are attacked. Members of congress have not been immune. The pope is repeatedly denounced by the bolsheviks.

The imperialistic designs of the master of the Kremlin, his incredible cruelties against his own people and those in eastern Europe who have been subjected to his expanding despotism, and his crimes against humanity need the concealment of a diversionary clamor. The hope is that they will pass unnoticed in the general commotion. The greatest terror in history has occurred under Stalin's rule, but in the interests of allied "unity" everybody is supposed to forget that, while the soviet propaganda agents contribute to this "unity" by repeated and vicious attacks against any one in America whose love of country and sense of decency do not permit him to be an accessory to the Moscow design for living.

Millions of non-Russians from eastern Europe have been carried into slavery since the start of the war. When Hitler and Stalin partitioned Poland in 1939, 180,000 Polish soldiers and an estimated million and a half civilians were transported to Russian Asia. Now that the whole of Poland has been "liberated" by the Red army, the process is starting again. When the Germans were driven out of the region east of Lwow, Stalin issued orders that no Pole should remain in those areas after Jan. 15 of this year. All over Poland men between the ages of 18 and 55 and women from 16 to 35 are being "conscripted" and taken to Siberia.

When this process of transporting the remnants of the Polish population is completed, there won't be many Poles in what is called Poland. Seven million of them have died since 1939; the rest are being deported. At Yalta it was decided that Poland should have "a free election" to choose its government. It will be a Polish election without Poles.

The same thing has happened in Latvia, Lithuania, and Estonia, of which never a word came out of Yalta. Every one who functioned successfully under the preceding regime has been packed into box cars and shipped to Siberia. The soviet secret police in their order to conduct deportations from Lithuania in 1940 referred to "the great pollution of the republic of Lithuania with an anti-soviet and socially alien element." By the time the Russo-German war broke out in June, 1941, at least 50,000 of the 2½ million Lithuanians had been deported. Presumably the process is on again now.

Nobody can even guess how many Russians and non-Russians are held at forced labor in concentration camps. David Dallin, in his "The Real Soviet Russia," has gathered together the fragmentary evidence of dozens of observers. He says that there may be anywhere from 5 to 20 million persons in the Russian slave camps.

How many Russians and non-Russians were murdered during the 27 years of the tyranny is also anybody's guess. In the Terror of 1918-19 more than 70,000 persons were the victims of "regular" executions, while hundreds of thousands were killed in the war between the Reds and the Whites, many of them unoffending and bewildered people who were killed for political beliefs they did not even have the wit to hold.

Stalin's liquidation of the kulak class which came to a head with the great famine of 1933 cost the lives of at least 3 and probably 4 million persons. Stalin dismissed this extinction with the remark, "Obsolete classes don't voluntarily disappear." The next landmark in this bloody regime was the great series of purge trials, where the world saw the astonishing spectacle of Stalin's old bolshevist comrades babbling in court that they were guilty of every sort of crime against himself and the state. By the end of 1938 more than 1,000 had died. For once qualitative considerations governed the killings.

Cynical people, especially those who expect to profit from the peace, may rejoice in America's alliance with the greatest murderer of all time, but they had better be a little careful. Red Star's article plainly indicates that the soviets, which already have powerful friends in the New Deal court, intend to enter even more actively into the political life of this nation. Those Americans who are willing to play along with them have their uses now. So did Zinoviev and Kamenev once. Where are they now?

RESTAURANT HOURS.

It is impossible to explain the latest restaurant curfew order of the war man power commission except as a product of mental aberration. The little minds of Washington, frantically issuing orders without warrant of statute, have finally gone completely off their rocker.

The Washington order was that all restaurants, with the relatively unimportant exception of a few all-night places and those within the gates of war plants or in service centers, must observe the midnight curfew. Some auxiliary maniac in Chicago interpreted the order to mean that no restaurant could open before 8 a. m.

This policy, if followed, would have meant that no day shift factory worker could eat breakfast unless he or she ate it at home. Presumably those who rent rooms without cooking facilities were expected to eat breakfast before they went to bed at night. The order was later modified to permit 5 a. m. openings and later was amended to permit opening as early as had been customary in the past. But this solves only half of the difficulties.

There are many thousands of people in Chicago who finish work at midnight or later. Included in these thousands are all the middle shift workers in war plants, as well as thousands of others in essential civilian pursuits. They normally eat their principal meal of the day when they quit work. Now they are supposed to go hungry until the restaurants reopen. Why? Because Jimmy Byrnes and Pretty Paul McNutt say so. There isn't any law that says so, just the arbitrary order of a couple of burocrats.

INFLATION.

Last week, W. Randolph Burgess, president of the American Bankers' association, warned congress that the danger of inflation was real. He said that the very decline in the reserve ratio to a point where the lower limit has to be reduced is a warning signal. Mr. Burgess recommended that congress request the federal reserve board to make an inquiry and report on the dangers of inflation and the steps which might be taken to prevent it.

The week before, both Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and Reserve Chairman Eccles told the public of their concern about rising security prices, now at the highest level in eight years, and proposed an anti-speculation tax. Eccles said that stocks, farms, and urban real estate had already gone up 40 to 80 per cent. OPA Administrator Chester Bowles, testifying at the capitol, said that OPA or some other agency ought to head off the boom in real estate prices. He didn't say how that could be done or how he would define a price he would approve.

If prices, already well advanced, should soar in a great spiral, it won't be because congress failed to pass the anti-speculation tax suggested by Eccles and Morgenthau, nor because Bowles or one of his brethren was denied the power to limit what real estate can be sold for. The price level advances because of the great excess of spending money that exists in the form of currency and bank deposits. If prices break loose, it will be because the avalanche of money became too much for our economic system to stand.

We don't believe that any good will come from having the reserve board study inflation and devise cures for it as Mr. Burgess has suggested. The head of the reserve board, Mr. Eccles, has already given his cure, and it makes no sense. He has long been an advocate of increasing the spending money of the country by payments from the treasury. In the threat of inflation we see Eccles' plant in full flower. Moreover, the assistant to Mr. Eccles is Dr. Alvin Hansen, the leading interpreter to America of John Maynard Keynes, the British inflationist whose plan to bring about a world-wide expansion in monetary reserves was embodied in the agreements formulated at Bretton Woods.

There are some steps which the government can take without further study to prevent the danger from inflation from becoming any more serious than it is. One of these safety measures we have repeatedly advocated in these columns for years: Call a halt to the government's sale of bonds to the banks and reserve banks. Bonds sold to banks bring about an expansion in the volume of spending money. Bonds sold to individuals result in diverting to government uses spending power already in existence. Despite this fact, the government sells new securities weekly to the banks, and the plans for the 7th war loan drive call for selling further large amounts to commercial banks. Thus the volume of money in circulation and the volume of bank deposits will grow larger and larger.

The other sensible steps available to the government are to cut down unessential expenditures everywhere possible, and to make available to civilians as large a volume of goods as possible. Neither step is being taken. Non-essential government payments are not being restrained. In the budget for the fiscal year 1946, the president suggested non-war expenditures of 13 billion dollars, twice as much as before the war and five times as much as in the last post-war period.

Since the beginning of the battle of the bulge in December, the supply of goods for civilians has been radically reduced. In making purchases, supply officers are assuming that the wars will last for years to come. W. L. Batt, assistant director of the war production board, told an audience a few days ago that at the end of the war against Germany our armies would leave their equipment in Europe and be almost completely reequipped before being sent to the Pacific. The shortages of goods which have resulted in higher prices will be accentuated even after Hitler's defeat. As the spending power in the hands of the public increases with no enlargement in the supply of goods on which money can be spent, and no expansion of the supply of houses, prices will rise.

The inflationary danger lies in these policies. To head off disastrous inflation the government does not need more power over civilians but more self-control.

Select the answers which you consider best. The last problem counts 5 points. Then look for the correct answers below.

1. Sea foods are usually richer than other edibles in Starch Iodine Calcium Iron
2. The number of bottles in a case of soft drinks is usually 12 18 24 48

FOREST OF CITIES.

Eyebrows are rising in astonishment among stay-at-homes when small, unfamiliar dots on the map of the Rhineland region thru which American soldiers are fighting turn out to be large cities. That recently occupied place named München [monkish] Gladbach, to distinguish it from a smaller Gladbach—who would have thought that it contained 200,000 people, mostly cotton weavers? Its growth has been modern. The population has quadrupled within the last half century.

* * *

This region, on both sides of the Rhine, is the most densely populated and urbanized part of Germany. Cities have expanded until they have grown together and are hyphenated. Thus Gladbach is Gladbach-Rheydt, and another industrial center a short jeep ride away is Krefeld-Uerdingen, containing 165,000 weavers of silk and velvet. After the Rhine has been crossed in the vicinity of Düsseldorf, the true Ruhr district begins, and the urbanization of that river valley is almost continuous. Going from one municipality to another is like crossing the border between Chicago's west side and Cicero.

* * *

If a peace time traveler with no interest in weaving machinery, tanneries, and foundries had found himself marooned in Gladbach for a few hours between trains, he could have taken in the minster, highly regarded as an example of the transitional style in Gothic architecture, and an old Benedictine abbey, now the town hall. This religious retreat, founded in 793, gave Gladbach the "München" handle to its name.

* * *

Rheydt, Gladbach's twin, claims the arch-Nazi Goebbels as native son, but nearby Düsseldorf has a prouder boast: Heinrich Heine, whose books Goebbels may have burned, was born there. The house was marked with a commemorative tablet until Hitler came into full power. If standing after the capture of Düsseldorf, it can be found in the Bolkerstrasse, near the town hall.

RIVER OF MEMORIES.

From Alpine heights to Netherlands you flow
To carry melting snows their northward course.
Past Lorelei, and crag, and dike you go,
Red-hued at times with blood, dark with remorse.
The watch upon the Rhine has long been kept,
But none the less Rhine Maidens lost their gold;
Embattled hosts across your waves have swept
To conquests new or sorrows manifold.

You cannot keep the warring men apart,
Or cleanse their crimes with washing in the sea,
And so your early swiftness loses heart
Until at last you flow but sluggishly.
Old tragic river where sad memories blend,
May Christendom your pagan watch soon end.

Wrestlers from Japan.

Linemaster: Your Japanese wrestler of the early '90s [Feb. 27] was Matsado Sorakichi, not Korakichi. I knew him well. He weighed 190 to 200 pounds at his best. His strength and agility were remarkable. His style was catch-as-catch-can, but he gave exhibitions of Graeco-Roman, collar and elbow, Irish hand and foot, and jujitsu wrestling.

He married an American woman who taught him English. She also induced him to quit the cup that cheers, which he occasionally overdid.

Several years after he died, a big, hulking Japanese wrestler weighing over 300 pounds came to this country and posed as Matsado Sorakichi. He was soon exposed and changed his name, calling himself the Great Matsudi. This man was shot in a saloon brawl in Butte, Mont., where he was challenging all comers. Ice Tea.

THE OCTOPUS' OVERSIGHT.

(A Brookfield Ballad.)

The octopus, as you should know,
Is far from lumbering and slow;
He fills his lungs with water, then
Ejects it like a fountain pen,
Which shoots him backward at a speed
Few living creatures can exceed.
Tho jet propulsion's nothing new,
A word of caution, friend, to you:
Before you imitate this trick
And try to lose your troubles—quick,
Be sure your gear's not in reverse,
To make the situation worse!

Pouring It on the Hair.

Beauty saloons [sorry—salons] are advised by a fashion magazine to use beer as a rinse for the hair. Putting a head on a beer is an old custom, but it's something new to be putting a beer on a head.

This idea could easily get out of control. Perhaps we'll soon have dry Martini shampoos, beeroxide bleaches, three-finger waves, and a profusion of tight little curls. New hair-brews will be launched by breaking a bottle over a bowed head to the inspiring strains of "The Mane Stein Song."

Hairtender, make mine an Old McHenna rinse.

F. E. D. asks: "Are any appointments being made in the navy supply corps?"

A few civilian appointments are being made, but the navy is attempting to fill its needs by transfers within the service. Applications from within the service now are being requested by the navy from officers who have completed six months' continuous active duty as of Jan. 1, 1945, who hold a bachelor's degree from an accredited college, and who were not over age 26 at the time of reporting for active duty. Naval R. O. T. C. seniors who will be under 26 on Jan. 1, 1946, also may apply. Applicants not previously accepted may re-apply.

P. N. C. writes: "I washed out in my advanced flight training in the navy. Is there some chance of being reassigned to some training in the air forces?"

Yes, there is a pretty good chance of reassignment to air crew, aerology, aerial photography, ground maintenance, control tower operation, and radar. It soon may be possible to be assigned to nonpilot navigator training leading to a commission. It is suggested you discuss the matter with the personnel officer or your C. O. Aviation cadets and student aviation pilots who were separated from pre-flight training by reason of the cut-back also may re-apply if they were in good standing and separated only because of the cut-back.

HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE CAN BE LIVED WITH.

MEDICINE has advanced greatly the life expectancy of man. As a result, we encounter more illnesses of middle and late life. High blood pressure [hypertension] is one of these. A diagnosis of this disorder in the elderly person often creates unnecessary anxiety, as it may be part of the aging process and as harmless as wrinkles or gray hair.

Its onset in younger individuals, however, may be more serious, particularly if it is exhibited in the course of pregnancy. It may also occur as a finding in Bright's disease, in certain forms of heart trouble with leakage of the valves, and in toxic goiter. In the majority of cases the origin cannot be found.

The main consideration is the effect of the elevated tension upon the blood vessels and vice versa. If the arteries become narrowed, the reading mounts. This, in turn, causes the lining of these channels to become thicker. In this way, nature protects the walls, as they are better able to withstand the intensified pressure.

Unfortunately, these changes in the vessels alter the blood flow to the heart and to the kidneys, ultimately injuring these organs. We can see readily that the height of the pressure is not the all-important factor. It is a question of how much damage has been done to the vital structures. Any attempt to lower the level will help to minimize wear and tear, but the outlook still depends upon the rapidity of degeneration.

Many physicians have had patients with extremely high readings who have lived 20 or 30 years after the condition was recognized. With these sufferers, proper adjustments have been made and impairment of the heart and kidneys was undoubtedly kept at a minimum.

The tragedy of high blood pressure is accentuated by its gradual onset and by the fact that it so often appears in those whose energy, productive imagination, and sense of responsibility make them valued members of the community. It is possible that the condition is the driving force which makes a man ambitious and successful. This is in contrast with the belief that the type of occupation influences its development.

The ideal type of treatment of any disease is one which affects the cause. As this is not entirely known in the malady under discussion we must be content, for the present, with controling the pressure. The victim's tempo of living must be lessened and emotional disturbances minimized. Sedatives may assist in reducing apprehension and fear which, in themselves, make the situation worse.

Drugs capable of dilating the narrowed vessels are frequently employed and are especially effective when combined with a mild sedative. The hypertensive need not be an invalid, provided complications have not arisen. Ordinary exercise, such as walking, is well tolerated, but vigorous and competitive sports are "out." Diet is often overemphasized. There is no justification for restricting proteins unless a certain variety of kidney destruction has ensued. Such a procedure often leads to anemia. In the absence of cardiac failure, salt may be used in moderation. Obesity should be avoided and this means that the calories must be judged accordingly.

HEART TROUBLE.

B. T. writes: What is chronic endocarditis?

REPLY.

This refers to inflammation of a heart valve. In the chronic stage, healing has taken place but the residual scar tissue, or adhesions may reduce the efficiency of that organ.

POPEYED.

Mrs. T. writes: Can protruding eyes, the result of goiter, be remedied? Operation was some time ago.

REPLY.

No. In severe cases, plastic surgery has been resorted to.

SPECIFIC ORGANISM.

S. N. writes: Is whooping cough a bacterial or a virus disease?

REPLY.

Most medical authorities believe that it is bacterial in origin being caused by the bacillus pertussis.

ULCERATION.

K. O. writes: What causes an ulcer in the bladder?

REPLY.

Inflammation, either locally or from a distant foci.

REDUCING.

To Sixteen Sans Amour.

O, what can all thee, knight-at-arms,
Who mourn and chant of fickle charms,
Do ye not know, or canst not see,
We are not all Belles sans Merci?

Pale princes, warriors sixteen,
Pray do not look so wan and lean,
For damosels with charm and poise
Await thee, royal pinup boys!

If maidens gay have thwarted thee,
'Tis but the way of history.
Do not a thousand ivory towers
Remain, to rouse thy combat powers?

Thy voices echo thru our land,
So choose thine armor, noble band!
Thy challenges we take, mlords,
Hearts are mightier than swords!

Dilemma.

Apparently there is no greater controversy in war time than the question of who jilts whom. A week ago today this department published a letter signed by 16 warriors in the Pacific. Of a group of 18 who went out there a year ago, only two still had their lady loves. Those two were married, one 15 years. The 16 wrote to demonstrate, they said, that what had happened to them had not destroyed their belief that there are girls "who will sit home and wait."

Well, their touching letter has produced a tornadic response. The replies now range from girls who want to write to the jilted 16, to the poem printed above, to girls who say it is the men, not the girls, who jilt. The latter, however, are in the minority.

Excerpts:

"I can't promise 'to wait forever if necessary' for one of them, because I already have my own man I'm waiting for, but I would like to write."

"Those boys must have a lot of faith in human nature to want to hear from any girls, after such consistent disappointments, but if cheerful, slaphappy letters will boost their morale, I'd love to write."

"What about the girl who, altho not formally engaged to a young officer, being under the impression, fostered by him that he expected her to wait, spends her year waiting, sends him two or three letters a week, many packages, humorous cards, clippings, gifts, to keep up his morale. Upon his return on leave she gets the grand brush-off."

"I was one of those gals who 'could wait forever if necessary,' and did, for three years! Yes, he went away a sweet, wonderful boy, but came home a conceited hero who could conquer anything in a bar. He found he could carve a new niche in society, and his old gal friend [that's me] was left holding the bag. See, you 16, you aren't the only ones having a problem."

"For two years I was the faithful fiancée of a soldier overseas. He was killed in action early in January, and I do miss writing to him. I can't promise to write to all 16, but may I have their addresses? No ulterior motive."

"I only wish with all my heart that I could belong to that changeable group of girls [the jilters] instead of representing the opposite extreme. By nature I'm a stickler and could wait forever. That won't be necessary in my case, for, you see, I received word the other day the boy I loved was on a ship that was sunk and he still is missing."

"I'd like to write one of those soldiers. I realize a little of what they went thru, having recently had much the same experience myself. It works both ways, you know."

"Since my 'one and only' has thrown me over for an Australian lassie, I'd like to compare notes with some of these boys."

"Being known as a 'myth,' I would like to help restore faith to those soldiers. I have not heard from my No. 1 navy boy in 10 months [last year it was eight], but continue to write several times a week. I'd like to tell them that thousands of girls are waiting at home."

"My boy friend is in the marines and has been overseas 26 months. I've written him every day and will continue to do so, until he's home again. Golly, I couldn't give him up for anything. I figure I hold his life in my hands, and I want him to live. I'm quite content to live on letters from him. But I'd be happy to write to any or all of those soldiers."

KIDNAPED PARTY SAINTS.

Lawrenceville, Ill., Feb. 27.—So the New Deal is about to discard Jackson in favor of Jefferson as its present party hero. There are reasons for the shift other than those assigned. They should be uncomfortable with either.

How embarrassing for the sycophants of British royalty to name, as their patron saint, the man who put Gen. Pakenham into cold storage. Moreover, at the first Jackson day dinner on Jan. 8, 1835, which he did not attend, President Jackson sent a note announcing that one of the first objectives of his administration—the extinguishment of the federal debt—had been accomplished. No New Dealer is comfortable in such company. And Thomas Jefferson, instead of mortgaging the citizenry of the Republic to dissipate their hard won savings in a quackery of beneficence, dispensed his entire personal fortune in public and private benefactions.

The homage which the hybrid jackass affects toward either of these two eminent patriots is unhappily placed. If the proponents of the New Deal were passed in review before the ghosts of Jefferson and Jackson, both of these American noblemen would doubtless simultaneously exclaim: "Depart from me, ye that work iniquity, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels. I never knew you."

J. H. HIGHSMITH.

ONCE BITTEN.

Harvard, Ill., March 2.—Anent your editorial, "Who Will Provide the Money?", I have a deposit certificate covering two bonds of the Chicago Rapid Transit company. This certificate is now 13 or 14 years old. Each bond was, as I recall, a promise to pay $1,000 in gold. Each bore the legend "First Mortgage."

In view of my experience with these "securities," I for one am not putting any more money into Chicago traction.

F. E. B.

THEY'RE NOT SO DUMB.

Chicago, March 1.—In this morning's cartoon showing Churchill addressing the house of commons under the "guidance" of J. Stalin, you depict the members of the house as a lot of dumb nitwits.

They, brother, are the boys who repeatedly make suckers out of us—a fact which, if my algebra is correct, gives us a rating of about 4-F [minus] in the mental department. MEANIE.

MEN OR MICE?

Queens, N. Y., Feb. 18.—Are business men citizens, or are they outcasts?

Then why don't they band together into a political action committee of their own and fight the vicious elements seeking to destroy business and substitute government control and eventual seizure so that a dictator can take over? It is amazing the way they are taking it on the chin without apparent resistance. A GOVERNMENT EMPLOYE.

THE CARTON ARRIVED EMPTY.

Chicago, Feb. 14.—A letter from a friend of mine somewhere in Germany states: "Just received a package from you containing an empty cigaret carton, and when I say empty, I mean empty. Not one thing in it but wadded paper."

I also sent a pipe, tobacco, and three boxes of candy, all a month before Thanksgiving. As of his last letter, Jan. 5, he has not received one of those packages. PEGGY LUKES.

THE PERSECUTION OF POLES.

Chicago, Feb. 28.—You gave a great deal of important space in your paper to the British clash with Greeks. Why do you keep silent on the far worse treatment of one of our most gallant allies, the Polish home army, by Russia. Russia is now hunting down the Polish home army, whose brilliant record is well known, for deportation and execution. How the press would cry out in horror if the British army in France began persecuting the French underground, but a similar situation prevails in Poland, and scarcely a murmur is heard thruout the land.

Maidanek has been mentioned in countless articles in the American press as a German concentration camp. It is now a Russian concentration camp for Polish patriots, but nobody must hurt Stalin's feelings by mentioning it. Are Americans calloused, or weak kneed, or merely uninformed? You can at least do something about the latter point.

FRANCES BROWNE.

THE SAME WARS, BUT LESS TAXES.

Evanston, Ill., Feb. 17.—In spite of all the horrid truths you publish against Britain [and with which I usually find myself in full accord], I nevertheless, find myself at times longing for the good old days of George III. He endeavored to levy only a 1 penny a pound tax on tea and we rebelled. What a piker he was! After we got rid of him we proceeded not only to levy a much higher tax on tea, but to tax everything else coming into the country. Next we started taxing everything produced in the country, then incomes, inheritances, etc., until now we are fairly beset on all sides with a most confusing array of taxes. One observer asserted there were 71 different taxes in a loaf of bread. Almost the entire business of government seems to be given over to levying taxes.

Any time you want to start a movement to erect a monument to George by public subscription count me in.

MARGARET KEELEY.

COMICS SHOULD BE COMIC.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Feb. 23.—I like THE TRIBUNE, but have a criticism, no doubt shared by thousands of your readers: The "comics" are too tragic for war time. There is more violence, murder, and swindling in the comic section than on the front page.

Chicago, March 1.—My aunt left her estate to her two brothers. About a month before her death [1] one brother died. He has one son. 2. How will the estate be divided? Her will was not changed. F. S.

1. The ordinary rule is that when a beneficiary dies his share lapses.

NOTE—From time to time, in this paper, there will appear an article which we hope will be of interest to our fellow Americans. This is number eighty-three of a series.

Grounded

Nine of the grandest lads in the world honored us here at Schenley the other day by paying us a visit. These lads came from the Army Air Forces Convalescent Center at Pawling, New York. They came, wearing their well-earned ribbons. Several of them walked with canes and one of them had not yet reached the stage where he could throw away his crutches.

When these convalescent boys are well on the road to recovery they have a lot of freedom to pursue the things they are interested in—things they want to do when they are, literally, firmly back on their feet. Quite a few of them are interested in embarking on advertising careers.

So, here they came to pay us a visit—these heroic bird-men. They were quiet, sincere. They demanded nothing. They were actually humble, but nevertheless avid to learn. We arranged for one of our seasoned advertising managers to take them in tow. They looked around here and listened, and some of our advertising procedure was explained to them. That was lesson No. 1 in this brief course. Then they were conducted through the offices of one of our advertising agencies. Lesson No. 2 consisted of an explanation of the procedure of an agency in handling the account of a client.

Lesson No. 3 began when some of the boys evinced an interest in radio advertising, so arrangements were made with one of the broadcasting stations and the boys learned something about the "behind the scenes" workings of a radio program.

And that isn't the end of the story. More of the same will follow, both here at Schenley and elsewhere—in other American businesses—because business today is social minded . . . realizes, like all of us do individually, that there's a debt to be "paid in full"! And for these lads that time is now. They've done their stuff!

Did we say we were honored? We'll say it again . . .

WE WERE HONORED!

PUSH ASSEMBLY ACTION ON NEW TRACTION BILLS

Green Studies Measure, Is Noncommittal.

BY GEORGE TAGGE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., March 4.—Legislative leaders today were hopeful of getting the two month old session out of the low gear this week with the introduction of the Chicago metropolitan traction bills, keystone of the Kelly-Green harmony program.

Gov. Green was studying the bills with Werner W. Schroeder, Republican national committeeman, and Jerome Finkle, head of the legislative reference bureau. Schroeder was in the picture because of his legal talents. Green withheld comment on whether he approved the bills received yesterday from Mayor Kelly's experts.

Daley and Harris Sponsors.

Unless there is a hitch, the bills will be introduced Tuesday or Wednesday. In the senate they will be handled by Kelly's legislative spokesman, Minority Leader Richard J. Daley. Majority Leader Homer B. Harris [R., Lincoln] will sponsor them in the house.

The Kelly-Green proposal calls for a metropolitan area board of seven to take over street car and elevated lines, with the profitable Chicago Motor Coach company being left on its own for the time being. Investors would be expected to provide capital at low interest rates which, however, would be tax free.

If the program proceeds smoothly, Republicans and Democrats in the legislature who seem bewildered by the harmony program may buckle down to work on the 357 bills which have already been tossed into the hopper.

Housing Bills Ready.

Slum clearance bills under the Kelly-Green banner also are due for introduction this week. They would give the city of Chicago power to condemn substandard property and sell it for housing projects. Insurance companies would be given the right to invest up to 10 per cent of assets in housing companies.

Skeptical legislators have evidence that the Kelly-Green coöperation will continue for a while. The leaders of the Republican and Democratic parties, the governor and mayor will appear together here at the St. Patrick's day dinner March 13.

Party Wrangling Halted.

The traditional partisan sniping in the legislative halls has been suspended. The only pot-shots to be taken thus far were aimed at the Republican Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett on his deficiency appropriation bill, but the shooting was done by downstate Democrats rather than Kelly's men.

Gov. Green tomorrow will try to get congressional reapportionment back on the road toward passage. It skidded into the ditch when congressmen protested against the proposed new district lines which would give Cook county half of Illinois' 26 seats. Green will confer with State Rep. Virkus [R., La Grange] and a committee representing the G. O. P. congressmen.

FATHER BUILDS MINIATURE JEEP FOR BOY, AGED 5

A miniature jeep that actually runs has made Roger Seacrist, 5, of 9520 S. Sacramento av., Evergreen Park, the most envied kid in the suburb. The jeep, an exact scale model of an original, was built by Roger's father, George, in the basement of the Seacrist home. Using only scrap materials and two automobile batteries for motive power, the father constructed the model in three months. An auto generator, with its windings reversed, serves as a motor. The little car will travel four miles an hour and one charging keeps it running five hours.

How to make a WAR GARDEN

BY BEN MARKLAND.

IN making a planting chart for a garden, the major decisions involve the selection of vegetables, time of planting, and location of the garden. Here are general rules to follow in making these decisions:

1. Plan to plant hardy vegetables as early as the ground can be worked. Peas, for example, are highly resistant to frost, snow, and cold weather and should be planted in late March or early April in northern Illinois. If the gardener cannot spade and prepare a seedbed for his entire garden before April 15, he should concentrate on preparing a space large enough for his early planting of peas. If this vegetable isn't planted early there is little chance of having a successful yield, since peas require an early start in cool, moist soil and must mature before the hot, dry weather of midsummer.

Greens, Radishes, Carrots.

2. Other vegetables which thrive best with an early planting and are resistant to light frosts include spinach, head lettuce, leaf lettuce, parsley, beets, radishes, carrots, onion sets, and onion seeds. If one corner of a garden plot is on high ground which dries early in the season, that section should be reserved for early plantings of hardy vegetables, leaving the lower parts of the garden for later plantings, of snap beans, tomatoes, peppers, and other tender vegetables.

Commercial gardeners in Cook county make plantings of spinach, onions, radishes, and other hardy vegetables in early April every year unless early spring rains make the soil too wet to be worked.

Size of Plot Important.

3. Some vegetables are not practical for small gardens and should not be attempted in plots containing less than 1,200 square feet. Sweet corn and such vine crops as squash, cantaloupes, and cucumbers, for example, return small quantities of food per square foot of garden space. Gardeners whose plots contain less than 1,200 square feet should concentrate on tomatoes, leaf vegetables such as spinach and lettuce, snap beans, and root crops, all of which return high yields of food per square foot of garden space.

A further discussion of garden planning will be included in this space Wednesday.

MESS CALL ENDS NEGRO SAILORS' HUNGER STRIKE

Los Angeles, Cal., March 4 (AP).—The two day hunger strike of 1,000 members of a Negro navy construction battalion at Port Hueneme, near Oxnard, Cal., ended today when the men reported for breakfast, naval officials said.

The navy reported that no known change had occurred in the conditions of which the men complained, but added that "apparently they just got hungry."

Norman O. Houston of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said practically the entire personnel of the 34th construction battalion, veterans of 21 months' service in the South Pacific, participated. Their complaint, he declared, was against the alleged addition of white men to the battalion for ultimate rating at chief petty officers, whereas the Negroes feel entitled to these ratings.

PREDICT G. O. P. VOTES TO ELECT PACINI TODAY

Active backing of Emil V. Pacini, 8607 Phillips av., in the 10th ward aldermanic run-off election today by Republican precinct captains—despite the assertion of Dr. Harry E. L. Timm, Republican committeeman, that his group will remain neutral—may mean Pacini's election by a sizable majority, political observers said yesterday.

Both Pacini and his opponent, Max A. Pieczynski, 8755 Saginaw av., are Democrats. Pacini ran first and Pieczynski second in the Feb. 5 election, but because none won a majority the run-off became necessary.

Republican Was Third.

Last month Pacini received 6,426 votes; Pieczynski, 5,047; Alfred O'Connor, a Republican, 3,271; and Frank S. Sowa, a Democrat, 1,878 votes. If Pacini receives approximately the same number of votes he garnered on Feb. 5 plus two-thirds of the O'Connor vote that the Republicans are expected to deliver, his election, observers say, is assured.

They said O'Connor was a weak candidate and, altho he has announced himself as neutral, the majority of his party's votes will go to Pacini. An indorsement by O'Connor, it was said, might be detrimental to either candidate.

Former Insurance Agent.

Pacini, secretary of the ward organization, contractor, former auto race driver, and World War I. aviator has the backing of the regular Democrats and Rep. Rowan [2d], the ward committeeman.

Max Pieczynski is a nephew of the late alderman. Now a tavern owner, he was formerly secretary to his uncle and the representative of a large life insurance company. This is his first venture in politics. Pieczynski has the backing of County Treasurer Schlaeger and a group of organized Poles in the ward.

The masked model, who will appear during the day in Field's windows wearing creations of well known designers, will make her first theater appearance tonight in a box at the Selwyn theater. Tomorrow night she will attend the Studebaker theater. Other theaters where she is scheduled to appear are the Erlanger on Wednesday night, Orchestra hall on Thursday night, the Harris Friday evening, and the Civic Opera house Saturday night.

Why America Is Watching the News from GRAHAM-PAIGE

For many months Graham-Paige has been making news in the manufacture of "Alligator" amphibious tanks, landing craft, and precision parts for super-bombers. Now this company is readying newsworthy plans for peacetime production. These plans are of unusual significance. Read this forward-looking statement by Joseph W. Frazer, for years an outstanding leader in the automobile field, now board chairman at Graham-Paige.

by Joseph W. Frazer

Wherever I go, all over America, I find more and more people asking about the story behind the news they are hearing from Graham-Paige. For people are beginning to realize that we have great plans in the making here. Plans that will affect the entire future of the automobile industry.

Graham-Paige is definitely going places. Beginning with a few war orders in 1940, we have been entrusted with constantly increasing responsibilities as our reward for work well done. Today we are among the nation's leading producers of "Alligator" amphibious tanks, landing craft, and high-precision connecting rods for super-bombers.

Now people want to know what we are going to do when our war job is finished. Well, here's the story, in brief:

We are going to build a new automobile at Graham-Paige. It will not be "just another car." The friends who have known me during my 32 years in this industry know that I would never "let them down" like that. It will be a beautiful car—an exciting car—built from new tools and dies, incorporating new principles of engineering, construction and design. It will be new from the ground up!

I predict that this new automobile will win popular acceptance in a way that has not been equalled since 1924.

We are also expanding the operations of our Farm Equipment Division. We will produce a new general-purpose tractor, with exclusive features that will give it distinct advantages over any in use.

We will manufacture several models of the Rototiller, the revolutionary power-tiller that does the work of plow, disc and harrow, and does it all in one operation!

Other new machines in our farm equipment line are equally interesting and newsworthy.

Many of my friends in the automobile and farm equipment fields have already written me requesting distributor and dealer franchises for after the war. I can only remark that I am flattered by their confidence in our new management. But I can assure them now that we shall live up to their expectations.

I hope this brief outline of our plans will give you some idea of the big things that are in the making at Graham-Paige. We have come a long way in a few months. Yet what we have seen is only a hint of the progress in store.

I believe I have told you enough, however, so that you, too, will want to "Keep Watching the News from Graham-Paige."

White Collar GIRL

Itinerant Columnist.

All you need for a jinx on a train trip is to have some one remark, "You're lucky; you always meet interesting people"—and depend on it—your very next trip will be a dud.

Absolutely no one on the train to whom you can talk! There's a man at the far end of the club car, chuckling over a book, shutting it now and then to hold his sides in merriment, but do you ever discover the title of this hilarious gloom-chaser?

There's a winsome, friendly little girl in the diner, galloping from table to table to inquire solicitously, "Where are your children?" But does she come near your corner with her bright, sweet smile?

There's an exquisitely dressed woman with such attractive jewelry, such smartness and simplicity, you give yourself up to brooding as to why you never look like that. But do you muster courage to probe the secret of her perfect grooming?

The answer is no.

At Last.

There are three men talking in subdued voices across the aisle and you think that here, at last, is something significant. A merger, perhaps, of vast importance? You catch a word, then another. They are discussing barber shops and whether brilliantine helps their hair.

There's a mildly befuddled lady who appears at dinner minus her handbag and, goodness, her ticket is in it and she doesn't have the vaguest idea what compartment, in what car she is occupying! A searching party is organized, headed by the conductor. When she returns she does talk to you, O, my yes! She's had more fun in Chicago. . . . Honestly she did the town. . . . Her friends, such cut-ups. . . . Never a dull moment, she always says. . . . But really this awful, awful curfew. It has made her realize there's a war on! You close your ears and sadly study the headlines, "Bitter, Bloody Fighting at Iwo Beachhead."

The Sidewalks of . . .

In New York the sidewalk vendors are selling jonquils, pussywillows, and acacia. Here, too, is chatter about the curfew. When the theaters pour forth their audiences, at night, there is a mad rush to reach the nearest bar before closing time. Broadway, now, has grown dim like sightless eyes.

At the hotel they are smitten with the amazing Bacall, who has been a recent guest. . . . Edward Everett Horton lunches within earshot—his voice recognizable. . . . Mamoulian's bride steps into the elevator, mink from head to hem, the green rims of her harlequin glasses complementing her red hair. . . . The theater, that evening, is perfumed [says the program] with "Spring Rain" and outside is a cold drizzle.

The help wanted columns continue to plead for workers. Only one company seems to stick to the "no married women employes" rule. Otherwise, wedding rings are as common behind counters and typewriters as are white collars.

Elegance hovers over 5th av., yet a brief advertisment in the "Executive positions wanted—female" column of the New York Times sets you to pondering whether, despite the furs and the flowers and the glitter, this isn't a man's town after all. For look! A white collar girl seeks a position as secretary to a busy executive—stipulates she wants to be his "right hand man."

Maternity Center Extends Its Drive 2 More Weeks

At a report meeting on Friday the membership enrollment committee of the Chicago Maternity center decided to extend its current drive for two more weeks. The final meeting will be held on March 16 in the Casino, under the direction of Mrs. Philip D. Armour Jr.

Miss Parker's Singing Helps a Limping 'Faust'

BY ALBERT GOLDBERG.

There were a few cases of good singing in the Universal Opera company's presentation of "Faust" at the Eighth Street theater last night—but not much else. Possibly a critic was the only one bothered by the shortcomings, for the audience filled every seat and vented its enthusiasm in shouts and whistles in and out of season.

Virginia Parker, who recently won the season's most important vocal competition, an Orchestra hall appearance in the Lotte Lehmann series, lent the performance its only touch of true professionalism. This, it is true, was more vocal than histrionic, for some one apparently had told Miss Parker that Marguerite should look and act like Mary Garden's Melisande, and she believed them. The singing, however, was entirely on the creditable side. Miss Parker's voice gains in smoothness and texture on each hearing, and the surety and tasteful musicianship which always distinguish her singing made the King of Thule ballad and the Jewel Song pleasant experiences.

Easily the next best voice, tho employed with too persistent openness, was that of Wilson Jones, the Mephistopheles. His "Calf of Gold" aria went with swagger and sonority and for a few moments rescued a dismally sagging Kermess scene. But when Mr. Jones began to act he acted, and for a time it looked as if not even the footlights could stop him. When the soldiers crossed their swords, this Mephisto reacted like Rigoletto writhing under Monterone's curse. Or perhaps a caged panther would be a better description.

The Faust of Robert Macdonald was easily the most lugubriously unhappy looking cavalier in the history of opera. Imagine Peck's Bad Boy dressed up in tights and his mother's old clothes and you get an idea. As for his singing, it was audible over the orchestra when he sang loudly enough, at which times it seemed moderately agreeable in quality. The Valentine of Otto Slatinsky Jr., was sung modestly well, tho the veiled production of his voice is not of a sort to insure its future. Joan Bishop cavorted around the stage briskly as Siebel, and would have sung better had she not been so busy with other things.

The orchestra for the most part played badly under the sluggish direction of Giovanni Berrafato, and the performance, in a manner of speaking, was in French.

Toni Tortoriello, who sang at Kimball hall last night, has a slender, immature, childish voice, which discovered difficulties in Haydn's "My Mother Bids Me Bind My Hair" and a Lullaby by Mozart, and was wholly inadequate to cope with Violetta's "Addio del passato" from "La Traviata."

Lionel Barrymore Score and Ania Dorfmann, Pianist, Heard with Sevitzky

Concert by the Indianapolis Symphony orchestra, Fabien Sevitzky, conductor; Ania Dorfmann, pianist. Presented at Orchestra hall Sunday afternoon, March 4, 1945. The program:

Preludium and Fugue.....Lionel Barrymore
[First performance in Chicago.]
Symphony No. 73, in D major, "La Chasse" ..... Haydn
Concerto for Piano, No. 1, in G minor ..... Mendelssohn
Symphony No. 4, in F minor..... Tschaikowsky

The Indianapolis Symphony orchestra under the direction of Fabien Sevitzky came visiting at Orchestra hall yesterday, with the Russian pianist, Ania Dorfman, as soloist, and with a novel string to its concert bow in a prelude and fugue by Lionel Barrymore, the first of the famous actor's orchestral works to be heard in Chicago. About a year ago Mr. Barrymore wrote "In Memoriam" for his brother John, and Eugene Ormandy played it in Philadelphia. Nothing of that performance drifted out here save the composer's rather wistful statement that thru it "there persist gypsy airs."

No gypsies showed their vagrant heads in the newer work, commissioned by Mr. Sevitzky last October. It has in mind some of the more sonorous transcriptions of Bach, without, of course, anything so rewarding as a Bach melody to give it glory. But the prelude handles its material well, and the fugue opens with a kind of "Peter and the Wolf" skirmish in the winds which soon settles down to the serious business of piling up layers of sound, topped at the climax by the inevitable intervention of the organ.

The whole thing has more skill than substance, rather like a trained orator who has nothing fresh to say but keeps you mildly interested while he says it. Yet even for the musical tribe of Barrymores with their mellifluous voices and "Miss Ethel's" gift for the piano, it's quite a technical accomplishment for a 65 year old actor recently turned serious composer. Eugene Zádor, the Hungarian composer who is Mr. Barrymore's friend and teacher, should take a bow.

Not so long ago a book on conductors classified Mr. Sevitzky as dynamic, and stated that such are his platform gyrations he perforce wears high shoes, has his conducting clothes cut a size or two large, and has evolved a nonskid method of fastening shirts. I am not disposed to dispute any of these things. Mr. Sevitzky was so dynamic yesterday even the national anthem began with a cannonade, and at the end of the concert he was just as he had been at the beginning, of neatness all compact.

His orchestra is modest in size and neither opulent in tone color nor infallible in pitch, but it can play capably enough when it gets the chance. The Barrymore score was adequately handled, and Haydn's "La Chasse" symphony had a good beginning and ending, particularly in the crisp definition of the hunting horns in the finale, tho its middle movements sagged when buoyancy lost out to nervous propulsion. The Mendelssohn Concerto was a deft surface performance in which the slow movement started out of tune, then fell in love with the languishing sound of cellos. Miss Dorfmann played the same tinkling music box performance she gave Beethoven's First Concerto with our own orchestra last season.

The concert ended with Tschaikowsky's Fourth Symphony, long believed to be indestructible. As a test case the performance added considerable ballast to that conviction.

Weddings Announced

In the presence of the families, Miss Virginia Hafner, daughter of Henry G. Hafner of River Forest, and Courtney Vaughn Parkinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas L. Parkinson of Babylon, N. JOURNEY UNDERGROUND

(The story of a Chicago hero's escape from German occupied France)

(Copyright: 1945: By The Chicago Tribune.)

By Flight Officer David G. Prosser

INSTALMENT VIII.

SYNOPSIS: The author enlisted in the Canadian air force in 1941, at the age of 20, and won his wings as a navigator. In 1943 he transferred to the American air force. On his ninth combat mission, Prosser's Flying Fortress was shot down over France and the crew bailed out. He landed alone in a field, seriously injuring his ankle. As he limped along a forest road he met two men, Jacques and Marceau, who took him to Marceau's home and furniture making shop, where he was hidden in the attic to await the healing of his injured foot. He met Marceau's mother, Mere Louise; Marceau's wife, Renee; Marcel, who helped in the shop; Germaine, whose husband was a prisoner in Germany, and Jeannette, whose father was a prisoner. Marceau arranged, thru his brother-in-law, who worked at the district police station, to get Prosser a false identity card which used his correct name, David, and identified him as a 21 year old electrician. Most of the time Prosser spent in the attic, but one day he went downstairs to visit the furniture shop.

"With my clothes and identity card, I rather began to feel French."

Watching the two men work with their one wood cutting tools was interesting. Marcel looked rather like a dwarf humped over his bench. As always, he had his dirty, grimy cap on and locks of his black hair stuck out from it at odd angles. The steel extension on his shorter leg seemed uncomfortable, placed on a rung of his stool. When he spoke to me he lifted his face from his work and flashed a quick glance at me to see if I had understood him. His eyes were deeply set and this feature was emphasized by his black ragged eyebrows and the shadow-like dirt that covered the upper part of his cheeks.

Physically Jacques was the antithesis of Marcel. He was a tremendous man and very strong. He, too, always wore a hat—a little beret that just fitted on his head and looked more like a skull cap than a beret. It covered all of his hair which I had never seen, but judging from his beard I supposed it to be black.

Jacques was rather silent and stayed by himself most of the time. I asked him where he had been the last few days, for I had not seen him for some time.

He said, "I have been around the shop. Yesterday I went to Paris to see some friends."

I inquired if many French people ever talked to the soldiers. Marcel answered this question.

"Few people talk to the soldiers and almost no one talks to the German civilians. We try to be cold and indifferent to them. If they say "Good morning" to us, we reply with a polite but cool salutation. Should we be forced to speak to one, we merely answer the questions asked by "Oui, Monsieur" or "Non, Monsieur"—never anything more than is absolutely necessary."

At this point of the conversation Marceau entered the shop. He had been to town buying some materials needed for their work, but he had been able to find only a few of the thing wanted.

Just then we heard quite a bit of noise coming from the courtyard, and Marceau told me to duck under a bench.

When the visitor had gone, I went back into the kitchen. Mere Louise had returned and was making bread. Either she or Renee made the bread each evening. It was easy to tell who had made the bread, for Renee's was heavy and gritty, whereas La Mere's was light and delicious. I was glad to see La Mere doing it that evening.

Soon some one knocked at the front door; Marcel rushed me into the anteroom while La Mere carefully investigated to discover who exactly was there. It was only Jeannette. She came into the anteroom to hang up her hat and coat just as I was regaining my feet from the place where Marcel had hidden me behind the sacks of flour. I asked her where she had been, and was surprised to receive the only complete answer to any question I had put to her. Usually she would look very shy when addressed and mutter little more than "Non, Monsieur," or "Oui, Monsieur."

However, this day she must have been happy, for she said with real feeling, "I have been out visiting some of my friends. It was really fun." The school term would not start until late in the autumn this year, she explained, and then the term would be reduced and the school day cut to only two or three hours. During the last two years of war rural schools had become terribly bad, but even so she said she liked going to school.

Much of the next two days I spent in walking from one end of the attic to the other hoping that this exercise would strengthen my ankle. At the end of the second day I felt that I had accomplished little in making the ankle strong, and had only succeeded in learning how to walk on it in the least painful manner. Despite my worry about traveling with so untrustworthy a foot, there were several factors that made me feel the necessity of an early departure, among which were the fear of staying in one place too long a time.

Depriving these people of a large quantity of food and the increasingly cold weather worried me, too. Altho I still thought I might go to Switzerland, I felt almost certain I would go to Spain, but it seemed that in another month the high Pyrenees mountain passes would be blocked with snow, and that I would have to wait until spring before going over them.

However, my most important reason for wishing to leave was that Marceau and Renee were going on a vacation in another five days. I did not like the prospect of staying in the house with Marceau away; he was head of the family and was the most sensible.

It had been decided that as I had an identity card it would be best to take the train all the way to Nevers and not to attempt walking around Paris. Marceau was to take me thru Paris to the Gare de Lyons and put me on the train for the south. However, if I stayed on after he left, Jacques would have to take me into the station. Jacques was undoubtedly very reliable, but I had more confidence in Marceau, and felt that when I first exposed myself to a world of German soldiers and policemen I wanted to be with Marceau. I definitely decided that I would leave the day before he and Renee went on their vacation. With La Mere's treatment and much exercise, it seemed that by then my foot would be sufficiently strong for travel.

Two days later La Mere Louise took la petite Anniette out for a long walk in order to give me another chance to come downstairs. Renee was in the kitchen working on the clothes I was to wear. They had found an old black suit coat into which I could just squeeze my shoulders. The lining had been badly torn. Renee had just finished reconditioning it when I entered the kitchen, and she was starting on the trousers. They were made of light blue cotton, and altho they had belonged to her grandfather, they were still far from worn out. The grandfather was about four inches shorter than I, and finding the extra necessary four inches of material that would match the trousers had proved so difficult that we had to compromise on a piece of darker blue cloth.

I had decided to wear my military slacks and battle dress jacket under my civilian clothing. If I had been arrested I felt that the uniform would be one extra factor that would save me from a spy's death, if I had been searched, the uniform would certainly have been discovered, but had the Germans gone that far they certainly would have realized that I was not a bona fide Frenchman before seeing the uniform.

The weather was growing colder each night, and as my civilian clothes were rather thin, it seemed that the battle dress would make a warm foundation.

When Renee had finished adding the extra lengths to the trousers I put on these civilian clothes over the military. The fit was fairly good, if a little snug, but the bottoms of the olive green slacks were visible. After that discrepancy had been rectified I looked almost like a Frenchman. With my clothes and identity card I rather began to feel French. I tried to foster this sentiment by repeating, "Je suis Francais, Je viens de Langly, Je suis, M. ——— ["I am French, I come from Langly, I am Mr. ———"] but when I came to my name, the reality slipped away. If Renee had only not used my real name.

In the middle of the fitting Marcel came in from the shop to eat a piece of bread. He thought Renee had done a good job, and that I really looked like an ordinary civilian. Then we began to talk about the trip. Marcel could not see how anything could go wrong if I followed his instructions. "Don't trust rich people, most of them are collaborators, but the worker will 99 per cent of the time be helpful."

"Of course, in Paris you will have no difficulty. Marceau will see you in the train and buy your ticket for you, but when you are in the south of France and are traveling on the local railway lines, it will be necessary to buy many tickets.

"Most of the railway workers are bons francais [good French] and will help you, but if one of them cannot buy a ticket for you, go to a restaurant or shop and talk to one of the customers—be sure he is not of the upper middle class or upper class, but choose a workman—he will get your ticket for you."

I wondered how I could dare to go into a restaurant, and thought that food must have been strictly rationed and one would need a ration card.

Marcel dismissed my fears. "There are many foreigners in France today, so restaurant proprietors are accustomed to seeing them. Probably the waitress will think you are German and give you better food than she would the ordinary Frenchman. You will be asked for your ration card, but only for meat, grease, and bread. Few people eat meat in cafes, but you will have to have the tickets for the grease and bread. I have some here that I do not need and I shall give them to you."

I protested, but nothing would stop his cutting out tickets for 600 grams of bread and 30 grams of grease. "You know that I don't need the bread," he said, "and this amount of grease is too small to matter, but for each meal you will need five grams, otherwise you won't get anything to eat."

Then, with a broad sweep of his hand, Marcel concluded, "If you follow what I have said, you will escape safely."

Lost: One Husband's Heart

SHE COULDN'T UNDERSTAND why her husband was drifting away from her. It never even occurred to her that her own "one neglect"—carelessness about feminine hygiene—was to blame. Today, so many modern wives use Lysol disinfectant. It cleanses quickly, thoroughly, and deodorizes, too. Yet it's so gentle for douching; doesn't harm sensitive vaginal tissues—just follow easy directions. Use economical Lysol. FOR FEMININE HYGIENE USE Lysol

Wartime conditions have required a change in the composition of Lysol, which does not reduce its antiseptic and disinfectant potency. A

Prunes, coffee, and orange rind blend flavors to make an unusual prune whip. The dessert won't be too hard on your sugar ration. A third of a cup of sugar is enough to sweeten six portions.

Coffee Prune Whip.
[Serves six.]

½ pound prunes
2 cups cold water
1 tablespoon plain gelatin
½ cup cold coffee
1½ cups prune juice and hot coffee
¾ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon grated orange rind

Soak prunes in cold water and cook covered until tender. Drain and reserve juice. Pit and mash prunes. Soften gelatin in cold coffee and dissolve with hot coffee and prune juice. Add sugar, salt, and grated orange rind. Chill until mixture begins to set. Beat with rotary beater until fluffy. Fold in prune pulp and pour into individual sherbet glasses.

Fresh dates are available in many markets now, and besides being good eating just as they are, make delicious desserts. Here's a date pudding which requires no sugar at all. Honey is the sweetener.

Date Honey Pudding.
[Serves five.]

2 cups chopped fresh dates
½ cup chopped nuts
2 eggs, beaten until light
¾ cup honey
½ cup sifted flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ cup bran cereal

Combine dates and nuts. Add honey gradually to beaten eggs. Sift flour with baking powder and combine with bran. Fold into the well blended honey and egg mixture. Add dates and nuts. Bake in a well greased pan at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. Serve with cream or custard sauce.

Speaking of fresh dates, try them in the breakfast oatmeal. They give it such deliciousness that you may find the family calling for oatmeal with dates for lunch as well as breakfast!

Now that dried fruits are more abundant than they have been, an occasional upside down cake isn't out of the question. This one has a gingerbread flavor.

Fruit Melange Cake.
[Serves 8 to 10.]

1 cup cooked prunes or dried figs
1 cup cooked apricots
½ cup raisins
½ cup broken nut meats
½ cup liquid from fruits
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons melted margarine
1 teaspoon ginger

Batter:
¾ cup shortening
1 cup sugar
½ cup molasses
2 teaspoons ginger
2 teaspoons cinnamon
2 eggs
2½ cups sifted flour
¾ teaspoon salt
¾ cup boiling water
1 teaspoon soda

Pit prunes and cut in halves. If figs are used, clip stems and cut in halves. Rinse raisins in hot water and drain. Combine liquid with sugar, margarine, and ginger, and place in baking pan or large skillet. Grease sides of pan. Arrange fruit and nuts over mixture. Cream shortening and sugar. Add molasses and spices and beat well. Add beaten eggs and stir. Add flour sifted with salt. Beat thoroly. Add water in which soda has been dissolved and beat again. Pour batter evenly over fruit. Bake in slow oven, 300 degrees, about 1½ hours. Loosen sides and invert on platter. Serve warm with cream.

Keep Stories About Illness from Children

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS.

[Copyright: 1945: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

A visiting relative carefully gave all the details about the serious illness of her nephew, and the small daughter of the house was all ears.

Several days later little Mary had a stomach ache and very shortly thereafter developed a high fever. When the doctor arrived he found the cause of the stomach pain to be a simple one, but he couldn't account for the extreme nervousness nor the temperature which accompanied it. It wasn't until the next morning that the child's mother learned that all the difficulty stemmed from the fear that a stomach ache meant the arrival of an ambulance, a trip to the hospital and an operation, "like Billy."

Then there was the little boy who was terrified when he caught cold. He'd had many and always taken them in his stride, but he'd been told all about his next door neighbor's experience with a case of sinusitis, and he thought all colds called for a like treatment.

Because you can't be everywhere that your children are all the time, or for social reasons, perhaps it isn't possible to keep discussions of physical ailments from their ears. But whenever and wherever you can, try not to let them hear descriptions of operations, the retailing of symptoms and treatments, and the dwelling upon of aches and pains.

In the first place, it is not happy or wholesome thinking for childish minds. And in the second place, it is likely to make a child give too much importance to his symptoms, or make him fearful of the consequences of actual pain. Persons of all schools of belief recognize that an apprehensive state of mind is not good for the body, so we should spare our children that.

ANSWERS TO SATURDAY'S QUIZ.

Q. 1—As South you hold:
♠754 ♥1084 ♦Q105 ♣KQ86
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 spade	Pass	Pass	Double
Pass	2 clubs	Pass	2 no trump
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three no trump. So far you have done nothing but inform partner that you have four clubs. The surprise values in your hand are the queen of diamonds and the fact that you have a sure club trick. Partners bidding marks him with a very powerful hand.

Q. 2—As South you hold:
♠— ♥K754 ♦K10742 ♣K765
The bidding has proceeded:

East	South	West	North
1 spade	Pass	2 spades	Double
Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Three spades. This hand will unquestionably produce a game and the prospects for a slam are rather on the bright side. Partner must have a very fine hand since he is forcing you to bid at the level of three tho you might have nothing. Since you are prepared for any suit at all, you may so inform partner by throwing the selection of the suit right back in his lap and at the same time advising him that the opponents may be trying to get away with something.

Q. 3—East and West are vulnerable. As South you hold:
♠94 ♥2 ♦KJ753 ♣Q10732
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 hearts	2 spades	Pass	Pass
Double	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Pass. First of all a double by a player who has opened with a two bid is technically for penalties. He needn't double to force you to bid, since you are obliged to keep going till game is reached. But on a common sense basis if partner has the wealth of high cards which his bid suggests, can you picture what is going to happen to the poor misguided East, who wanted to inject himself into the picture.

Q. 4—Partner opens with one club and you hold:
♠Q7 ♥9754 ♦A94 ♣KQ76
What is your response?

A.—One diamond. This answer may appear like an attempt to be fancy, but actually there is nothing smart-allecky about it. The hand is a little too good for a mere raise to two clubs and not good enough for a jump to three. A temporary bid is therefore in order. It is pointless to bid the nonbiddable heart suit, since partner is afforded an opportunity to bid one heart over one diamond if he has any sort of four card heart suit worth mentioning.

Q. 5—As South you hold:
♠KQJ7 ♥AK632 ♦Q4 ♣65
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass

What do you bid now?

A.—Four spades. You must not show the heart suit, since a bid of four hearts at this point would be construed as a slam try and you should not entertain any such ideas in the absence of a slam try by partner. You needn't worry about the spade situation. Partner has at least four of the suit [If he has been brought up properly].

Q. 6—As South you hold:
♠K9 ♥AKQ97 ♦J962 ♣42
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
2 spades	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
3 spades	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Six spades. This should make it clear to partner that you have the king of spades and a good heart suit. It is not possible that you are off two tricks in either of the minor suits, since partner in order to have a minimum of four honor tricks would have to hold a high card in each of these suits. Your playing tricks count up to 13 because partner's opening two bid accounts for nine of them. Since this is merely a matter of controls a Blackwood bid may be in order. If opener has three aces you may gamble a grand slam.

Q. 7—As South you hold:
♠AQJ4 ♥1076 ♦7 ♣AKQ9
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South
1 heart	4 diamonds	?

What do you bid?

A.—Six hearts. This is not the time or the situation for scientific treatment. East has made matters pretty tough and such conventional bids as four no trump will not be helpful. What if partner has two aces. Are you going to bid seven. Of course not. But almost any opening bid will give you at least a fair chance for a slam, so just sit straight up in your chair and bid it.

Q. 8—As South you hold:
♠A942 ♥— ♦AK763 ♣A532
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 heart	Pass	2 diamonds	Pass
3 hearts	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 hearts	Double	?

What do you bid now?

A.—Redouble. Unless you know something about your partner that we don't. Except for your heart shortage you could almost promise a slam. Even with a bad trump break, 10 tricks should be a cinch.

Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Mar. 4.—Darryl Zanuck's next, as I said before, will be "Razor's Edge" with the same staff he had for "Wilson"—Lamarr Trotti to write the screenplay and Henry King to direct. Alice Faye, who's been wanting a dramatic part, will probably be the feminine lead, with another good part going to Maureen O'Hara. Sounds as tho they're aiming for an all-star cast. . . . Joan Blondell is about to be signed for the Clark Gable and Greer Garson starring vehicle "Strange Adventure." . . . Alexander Korda, as soon as travel is permitted, expects to do "Crime and Punishment" in Russia, for which Orson Welles will go over as soon as he can get a passport for his wife. So far there's just one couple signed for the picture and that's Guy Pierce, makeup expert at Metro, and his wife. . . . Paulette Goddard's outside deal is all set at RKO with Husband Burgess Meredith, Director Jean Renoir, and Writer Dudley Nichols. I call that nice setting up. . . . Joseph Schildkraut goes over to the theater between pictures to do "Julius Caesar" in the fall. Margaret Webster will revise the play and direct it. . . . Dorothy Gish will do the new Oscar Serlin show, "A Bee in Her Bonnet," which has an American background of 1912.

Time to Hold Everything.

Now that Judy Garland has finished her dramatic picture "The Clock," Kathryn Grayson wants to be in one. Looks as tho they might let her. I do think we've gone a little screwy. All the good singers are going dramatic and the dramatic players are doing bad singing. And the only sufferers are the paying public. . . . Michael Dunne is the fair-haired boy at 20th. He's Irish-American. His father belonged to the Abbey players, and Michael did a lot of radio in New York. He's now doing the romantic lead in "Junior Miss," and is testing for the lead in "Leave Her to Heaven" and "Fallen Angel." The cutting room boys over there say he has the greatest ease they've ever seen on the screen in a newcomer. . . . Sam Goldwyn's releasing contract at RKO ends with "Wonderman." I have a hunch he's over in England whipping up a deal with Arthur Rank, but you know those hunches — sometimes they pay off.

This Steinbeck Comes High.

John Steinbeck wants $200,000 for "Cannery Road," which Metro would like to have for Wallace Beery, but he has attached these strings: Steinbeck wants to okay script, okay the production, work in association with the director, and give final okay on what shall be on that screen. . . . Is it true that Arthur Schwartz is also leaving Warners? My, my, who've they got left over there? . . . Bing Crosby has started his first scrap book. It contains letters of praise for "Going My Way," and the signatures sound like a copy of "Who's Who." He is doing this for his children. . . . Laurette Taylor is compiling those articles of reminiscences she's been writing for magazines and will bring them out in book form. . . . H. Allen Smith's new book, called "Desert Island Decameron" will be out in May. It's a collection of stories he's read and liked, by other authors, with an introduction to each piece telling why he liked it. . . . Joseph Kennedy's son, Jack, who's now recuperating in Arizona, is writing a book about his brother, Joseph Jr., who was killed in action.

From the Mail Bag.

A letter from England says, "It's mighty funny to see Claire Luce, Fred Astaire's dancing partner in 'The Gay Divorcee,' playing 'Anthony and Cleopatra' at the Stratford-on-Avon festival. . . . Anna Neagle goes into partnership with an American manager and will star in several of our plays. One of them, I understand, will be Helen Hayes' 'Harriet.' Nothing is said in the new setup about her husband, Herbert Wilcox. . . . The Lunts are still packing them in. They're scheduled to do a revival of 'The Guardsman' in June in New York if the war is over. . . . Maj. Neal Lang is head of the officers' mess. . . . 'A Song to Remember' with Merle Oberon is in its fifth month. . . . 'Wilson' didn't do the business expected of it over here, but 'Parkington' broke all previous records for Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon films. 'Constant Nymph,' which was made heaven knows how many years ago by Warners, just opened over here. . . . I was recently introduced to a beautiful girl, Margo Fitzsimon, and her mother. She looked so familiar I couldn't help but say so. Then I learned she's Maureen O'Hara's sister. She's a beauty and is at present making a film 'I Know Where I'm Going.'"

Film Built Around the Elements Just Too Thin to Jell

"DESTINY."

Produced by Universal, directed by Reginald Le Borg, featuring Gloria Jean, Alan Curtis, Frank Craven, Grace McDonald, Vivian Austin, Frank Fenton, and Minna Gombell, and presented at the Oriental.

By Mae Tinée.

Wicked wimmin were the cause of Cliff's downfall, and it made him pretty ornery until he met one who "understood the elements" and, therefore, fire wouldn't burn her, bees wouldn't sting her, and water would appear upon her request. The elements or something have the same effect on the boy with the penitentiary record, and he just can't steal her money or run away and leave her dying father. The same mysterious force apparently controls the police, because altho he drove the car in which a holdup man escaped, and the state patrols have been hunting him for a number of days, when all is said and done—they don't even wish to discuss the matter.

"Destiny" apparently was intended to be delicate fantasy, with Frank Craven as the father of the pretty blind lass, Gloria Jean, who has such a good effect on the ex-convict and the police, and Alan Curtis as the victim of a number of double-crossers, but it just doesn't jell—or maybe I don't understand the elements.

Elinor H., Peoria, Ill.—To remove the wrinkles in a Turkish towel and raise its nap, I give it a vigorous shaking before hanging it up to dry.

Mrs. John Oslund, Holland, Mich.—Letter writing is no longer a hardship since I fastened a canvas pocket on the side of my kitchen cabinet to hold a memorandum pad. I jot down ideas while working and slip into the pocket. I also mark passages suitable for individual letters as I read the newspapers, and clip. These go into the pocket, too, and when I'm ready to write a letter it is worth the postage.

This Season's Spring Coats Are Different

BY REA SEEGER.

There's all the difference in the world between this spring's coats and those of former years. Shoulders are swankily wide and dashing but the harsh, squared-off effects have vanished, the shoulder line being curved, rounded, and most flattering. Sleeves tell the new fashion story. Some are set in in simple lines; others are intricately cut, then inset in unusual outline and detail; all are easier to slide into than ever before.

The loose coolie coat silhouette is not only becomingly smart, but practical as well. Such coats will top suits or dresses this spring and summer. A collar is something almost forgotten because the collections all show the simple collarless neck lines, cleverly fashioned so as to curve up softly around the neck. Cuffs are gone, too; coats are streamlined down to the minimum and look young, sleek, and trim.

Smart beige tone coats vie with the brilliantly colored garments. Beige from palest cafe au lait to deep caramel are grand contrasts for navy blue or black. Shocking pink, raspberry, cerise, and the eye catching colors of lime to jade green offer strong color possibilities with every monotone. Checked and tweed mixtures come in third. Wool braid trim is effective on many all-purpose models, as are rows of buttons, and telling motifs of applique scrolls and bands are a third distinctive contrast on the coats unpacked in time for early Easter shoppers.

Need for Rugs by South Side Families Told

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

Mrs. B., a social worker, has requested our assistance in obtaining two beds with mattresses and a living room rug for a south side family. Some months ago the head of the household received a severe injury while on his job, which required weeks of hospital care. He has returned home, but is badly crippled and is able to move about the house only with the aid of crutches, and walking on the bare, cement floor presents a danger to him which a rug could remedy.

"Dear Miss Brown: You have helped us several times in the past, and we are appealing to you again. Will you please try to help us obtain some dishes and a room size rug? My wife is working, but her salary covers only our rent and food, and other household needs are impossible to buy. My crippled hands limit my employment, and the job I had a few months ago ended with the flare-up of an old physical ailment. Our five children are in frail health and go to the chest clinic for periodic checkups." The S family also is living on the south side and gifts from that general vicinity can be called for at least expense.

$5 PRIZE RECIPE

Nut and Honey Filled Coffee Cake.

1 cup milk
2 yeast cakes [small size]
4½ cups flour
½ cup sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup shortening
2 eggs

Scald milk and cool to lukewarm. Crumble yeast and add to milk. Sift flour with sugar and salt, then cut in shortening. When yeast is softened, add with well beaten eggs to above mixture. Beat well, cover, and let stand in refrigerator overnight. In the morning, divide dough into two equal parts and roll very thin. Spread with nut and honey filling made as follows: Mix 1 cup nuts, finely chopped, with 1 cup milk, ½ cup honey, 2 tablespoons margarine; bring to a boil. Mix small amount of hot mixture into 3 well beaten eggs, return to pan and cook until thickened. Cool and spread on dough which has been lightly spread with margarine. Sprinkle filling with cinnamon. Roll dough like a jelly roll and fasten ends of rolls together to form a ring. Let rise, covered, until doubled in bulk, 45 minutes to 1 hour. Bake at 350 degrees 35 to 40 minutes. Ice if desired.

Thru the Looking Glass

You know how you set aside a best hanky, gloves, and other little accessories to wear when you get all dressed up for a special party or date? Well, one of our friends told us about her favorite way of adding a special note to her preparations for gala events and we liked it so much we thought you might be interested to know about it, too.

This woman has a little beauty box which she has filled with items reserved exclusively for such use. In it she keeps her nicest bath salts and dusting powder, a complete set of makeup, face powder, rouge, lipstick and eye makeup, and her most precious perfume. When the big day arrives she lifts the box out of its hiding place and gets herself off to a happy start by dipping into its contents. The sense of everyday routine is taken away from her dressing as she enjoys the luxury of the fresh beauty aids.

We think her plan contains as much sense as it does fun. So often when you start to get ready for a fancy luncheon or trip to the theater and begin by working with the beauty preparations that are used day in and day out, you're likely to bog down and go about it half-heartedly. If you have an assembly of pretty things to use, and anticipate the fun of the occasion even as you start running your tub, your spirits brighten perceptibly. More than that, you'll be inclined to be a bit more meticulous about your grooming and more exacting about the whole procedure. As a consequence you'll go thru the evening confident that you're looking your very nicest and feeling as dainty as a piece of Dresden china with never a doubt that your appearance isn't all it might be.

THESE 6 BOUTS HAVE A TOUCH OF DYNAMITE!

Big Glovers to Toss Punches Friday.

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN.

An unusual condition existed in the light heavyweight and heavyweight divisions of the Tournament of Champions last Wednesday in the Stadium when the quarter-finals were run off—a condition which presages six torrid engagements in these two classes before the championships are decided in THE TRIBUNE's 18th annual Golden Gloves finals Friday night in the same ring.

The fans long have been accustomed to seeing the big boys land their lethal wallops. Bout after bout down thru the years has resulted in knockouts, clean or technical. Last Wednesday, however, there were four bouts in each of the two heavier classes and seven of them went the distance, the other ending in the second round. This lone knockout was scored by James Lee, representing the New Orleans [La.] Item, over Al Kerr of the Muncie [Ind.] Star, in the 175 pound class.

Three Bouts in Each Class.

So, on the basis of the quarter-finals the battles Friday should be something to see—four semi-finals and a pair of finals. These, however, will be only two sections of the gala windup to one of the most thrilling of the 18 Golden Gloves amateur boxing shows that Chicago fans have witnessed. There will be two semi-finals and a final in each of the other six weight divisions, from the 112 thru the 160 pound punchers.

The 175 pound class of Golden Glovers, which first brought Champion Joe Louis into the limelight back in 1934, and the heavyweight division, have given to the boxing world some of its finest exponents. Besides Louis in the light heavyweight group there were Max Marek, Carl Vinciquerra, Jimmy Reeves, James Richie, and Ray Standifer, among others who won Golden Gloves titles with displays of exceptional ability.

Among the heavyweights who made names for themselves were Johnny Pacek, who later used the name of Paychek; Otis Thomas, Lorenzo Pack, Paul Hartnek, Dan Merritt, Tony Novak, and Cornelius Young.

Attra Seeks Second Crown.

This year, Friday night in the Stadium to be exact, there will be eight more large youths seeking the honors that go with participation in the greatest amateur boxing show in the land. In the light heavyweight division will appear Sgt. George Siebert, Corp. Tom Attra, James Lee, and Adolfo Quijano. The heavyweights will be John Harding, Corp. William Zuke, Paul Thomas, and Chicago's Luke Baylark.

Sgt. Siebert is from Pittsburgh, Pa., but he's a member of the army air corps at Chanute field and won the Peoria [Ill.] Journal-Transcript's tournament. He's 22 years old.

Corp. Attra, a member of the Fort Worth [Tex.] Star-Telegram team, is seeking his second Chicago championship, having won in the same division in 1942.

Quijano Thrills Fans.

Lee, representing the New Orleans [La.] Item, is 22, a welder by trade, and has been boxing occasionally the last two years.

Corp. Quijano, attached to the Muroc, Cal., army air base, is a Mexican, born 23 years ago in El Paso, Tex. He has been boxing three years. It was Quijano who gave one of the most thrilling exhibitions of courage and determination in outpointing St. Louis' hard hitting John Gulley in the quarter-finals last week. He's a member of the Los Angeles [Cal.] Times squad.

Moving into the heavyweight class, there is the Kansas City [Mo.] Star's Harding, an 18 year old lad who has been boxing only six months but who has made good use of an athletic background of basketball, baseball, and football.

Milwaukeean Only 16.

Then there is Corp. Zuke of the Omaha [Neb.] World-Herald team, a member of the air forces at the Lincoln, Neb., army air field, where he is a physical instructor.

Thomas, the Milwaukee [Wis.] Journal's champion, is only 16, and, while he never has won a title in a year and a half of boxing, he had little trouble making his way into Friday's semi-finals.

The fourth heavyweight is Baylark, the giant Savoy A. C. champion. Luke also represented Chicago in last year's Tournament of Champions after winning the north section title. He duplicated that feat this year and thinks he'll get a Golden Glove Friday night.

The happy laughter and the joys
That radiate from girls and boys.

Be happy, child, I envy you,
I wish you'll have small sorrows few,

GRIMM DROPS BAT FOR RAKE IN FRENCH LICK

Lost River Pitches Some Fast Work.

Charley Grimm, the famous Missouri dirt farmer, stands ready to wield a rake on the infield of the Cubs' training grounds at French Lick, Ind., he said last night in making a telephone report on the flood from Lost river which last week inundated the diamond.

Playing the part of a ball field lackey never before has been included in the duties of a big league manager, but there is also a shortage of manual laborers in French Lick.

Flood Waters Recede.

"That's right," boomed Charley, "I've offered my services to our groundskeeper, Bobby Dorr, and also have told him a couple of other fellows will be willing to hire out—Coach Red Smith and Andy Lotshaw, the trainer."

"It's a beautiful Sunday down here," said the Cub boss, "and the flood waters are receding. When we got here Saturday it was impossible for cars to get over the highway to the hotel. But today they are coming thru and one of the settlers told us that in a day or two most of the water will be gone."

First Workout Thursday.

Grimm reported that water failed to reach the high ground in the outfield of the diamond which is located on the 18th hole of the golf course. If the weather is mild Thursday when the first workout is scheduled the players will frolic in the outfield. If not, they will exercise in the auditorium of the French Lick Springs hotel. This mammoth room has been converted into an indoor practice field, with three specially constructed pitching mounds.

PHILS LIST 36 PLAYERS

Philadelphia, Pa., March 4 (AP).—The Philadelphia Phillies squad is expected to number 36 when spring training begins March 14 at Wilmington, Del. General Manager Herb Pennock has lined up 14 pitchers, including Manager Fred Fitzsimmons.

Dick Barrett, who won 12 and lost 13 for the Phils last year, signed a contract Friday. Other hurlers back from last year are Al Gerhauser, Anton Karl, Vernon Kennedy, Bill Lee, Ken Raffensberger, Chester Covington, and Charles Schanz.

Gus Mancuso is expected to bolster the catching staff, with Joe Antolick from Wilmington, Andy Seminick of Buffalo, Harold Spindell of Seattle, and Mervyn Shea, a holdover, also listed.

Infielders include Granville Hamner, Charles Letchas, and Ford Mullen from last year, Jimmy Foxx, trying a comeback, Garvin Hamner of Richmond, Fred Daniels and E. M. Mott from Utica, and Ralph Caballero from Louisville.

Four veteran outfielders are expected to return. They are Buster Adams, Coaker Triplett, Jim Wasdell, and Player-Coach Chuck Klein.

PAIR OF CHICAGO G. I. ATHLETES WINS PARIS TRIP

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, March 4.—Two air force enlisted men from Chicago tonight won a trip to Paris by helping the Frank's Yanks of the 1st air division capture the 8th air force basketball championship. In the final game, in which Pvt. Harry Katz scored two field goals and Tech. Sgt. Fred King played a stellar floor game, the Yanks scored their 34th consecutive triumph by defeating the Flying Circus quintet of the 2d air division, 41 to 35.

The winners will go to Paris in April for a tourney with the basketball champions of the 9th and 15th air forces to decide the European theater air forces title. In a semi-final contest today, King and Capt. Shirley Held of Kenyon, Minn., sparked the Yanks' 45 to 43 victory over the 3d division Gallopers by dropping in successive field goals with only 45 seconds to play.

In a Saturday night contest Lt. Paul Kinneman, former University of Illinois star, tallied 22 points as Robertson's Riders, an officers' team of the 93d bomb group, won their 23d straight game by crushing a fighter group outfit, 61 to 19.

SNEAD 22 UNDER PAR TO WIN OPEN TITLE IN FLORIDA

Jacksonville, Fla., March 4 (AP).—Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., slammed out a six under par, 66, for a 266 total today to win the 72 hole $5,000 Jacksonville Open golf championship. He was 22 under par for the 72 holes.

It was his sixth victory of the winter circuit and enriched his earnings by $1,000, In second place was Bob Hamilton of Chicago, National P. G. A. champion, who shot 67 today for a total of 270.

Next in line, in a three way tie for third place, were Ky Laffoon of Chicago, with 72 today and a 274 total; Bruce Coltart of Absecon, N. J., with 69 and 274, and Sam Byrd of Detroit, who scored 68 today for the same total.

Nelson, McSpaden Tie.

Following them were Byron Nelson of Toledo, O., and Harold [Jug] McSpaden of Sanford, Me., with 275, and amateur Fred Haas of New Orleans with 277.

It was Snead all the way during the final round. McSpaden, the hard luck player of the winter golf trail, who tied with the Virginian at 200 yesterday, didn't have a chance.

Snead opened the round by logging a birdie three on the 340 yard first hole. McSpaden had a poor drive off the first tee, hooked his second off the green and required three to get down for a bogie five.

Hamilton Draws Cheers.

McSpaden then really went to pieces for a few holes, winding up the nine with a 40. He steadied down somewhat on the back nine, carding 35.

Big Bob Hamilton won acclaim of the touring pros and gallery alike. He shot two sizzling opening rounds only to falter with a 71 yesterday. Today, however, he bounced back with a 67 to regain his easy swinging form.

SWIMMER SETS RECORD IN RIVER PLATE CROSSING

BUENOS AIRES, March 4 (AP).—Clipping 32 minutes from the previous record, Angel Viera, Argentine swimmer, crossed the River Plate in 22 hours and 18 minutes.

He left Colonia, Uruguay, Friday and arrived last night at La Plata, Argentina, a distance of about 24 miles. The previous record was held by Daniel Carpo, a Peruvian.

Hawkeye Fans Hail Big Nine Champions

BY WILFRID SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Iowa City, Ia., March 4.—The Byrnes closing order chased Iowans from restaurants and clubs at midnight, but in two hours last night Iowa basketball fans completed an excellent job of celebrating the Western conference basketball championship the Hawkeyes had won earlier by defeating Illinois, 43 to 37. It was Iowa's first exclusive title in 46 seasons, altho the Hawkeyes twice previously had shared this honor.

The demonstration started in the Iowa fieldhouse, where Murray Wier, 5 foot 8 inch forward from Muscatine, Ia., had made the final free throw seven seconds before the end of the game. Hundreds in the record breaking crowd of 14,400 milled around the Iowa bench to praise the Iowa players and their coach, Lawrence [Pops] Harrison. It was climax to an 18 game season in which Iowa won 17 and gained satisfaction last night for the 43 to 42 defeat by Illinois in Champaign.

Ohio State Finishes Second.

By defeating Illinois, Iowa finished with 11 victories and one defeat in Western conference competition. Ohio State, beaten by Purdue and Illinois [in divided series], was second. The Buckeyes, defending champions, did not play Iowa. Illinois, suffering a fourth consecutive defeat last night in as many road games, finished third in the Big Nine. The Illini also were beaten by Michigan in Champaign.

These three teams dominated the conference race altho several others were sufficiently strong occasionally to win from the leaders. Michigan, for instance, not only defeated Illinois, 43 to 38, but led Iowa in the game in Ann Arbor until the last two minutes.

After the defeat by Purdue, 37 to 36, last January, Ohio State played consistently, losing only to Illinois, 56 to 41, on Feb. 12. Three nights later, in their last game at home, the Illini beat Minnesota, 49 to 48.

Moments of Glory.

In the last three weeks, Northwestern and Indiana had moments of glory in contributing to Illinois' downfall, while Wisconsin thoroly scared the title bound Hawkeyes here in a 54 to 53 game Feb. 19.

Ohio State set the team scoring record for the season with 85 points against Indiana Feb. 24. Three overtime games were played, Northwestern losing in an extra period to Purdue and Michigan, and Ohio State defeating Michigan in the first game of the campaign last December.

Iowa's champions never were behind in any conference game played at home, but last night when the Hawkeyes staved off five Illinois rallies in the second half they gave the home folks a sample of how they came from behind at Michigan. Dick Ives and Clayton Wilkinson, on two occasions each, and Jack Spencer provided the goals to increase the margin under pressure.

Ives, who relinquished his individual conference scoring title to Max Morris of Northwestern, paced the Hawkeyes in 18 games with 217 points.

Detroit, Mich., March 4 (AP).—The Detroit Red Wings hammered in seven second period goals tonight—three of them by Center Joe Carveth—in beating the Boston Bruins, 10 to 4, in a National Hockey league game before 10,780 fans.

Syd Howe, veteran Detroit center, had one goal and one assist to equal Nels Stewart's all time record point production in the league—514 points. Each reached that total over a 15 year span.

Carveth's three goals came within a space of 8 minutes and 57 seconds as the Wings checked, temporarily at least, the Bruins' bid for a Stanley cup play-off berth.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

The Chicago Blackhawks, who will play for money, marbles, or chalk when the going is at its toughest, last night proved it again with a 6 to 4 triumph over the world champion Montreal Canadiens before 15,614 spectators in the Chicago Stadium. Every member of that nigh full house will testify, if somewhat hoarsely, that it will be a long time before the Stadium witnesses such a thriller.

The victory, most convincing of the 1944-'45 Chicago season, projected the Hawks into the thick of the struggle for fourth place, last spot in the Stanley cup foursome. It moved them within one game of the fourth place Boston Bruins, who were undergoing a 10 to 4 trouncing in Detroit last evening, and just a half a game behind the fifth place New York Rangers, whom they meet on the same Stadium ice Wednesday night. The Rangers lost a 6 to 3 duel with Toronto.

Clint Smith Takes Hero Role.

Hero, if you must pick a soloist in the fighting Blackhawk ensemble, was Clint Smith, the dark haired Chicago center, who didn't stop at engineering the hat trick of three goals, but added a fourth, all of them coming in the dramatic last period. Joining Clint was his line colleague, swift Bill Mosienko, who showed his gratitude to the Sideliners' rooting club for having chosen him the most valuable Hawk of the season by connecting for four assists, these also coming in the fourth period. For Smith, it was a pleasant note to his boss and fellow townsmen of Vancouver, B. C., Manager Paul Thompson, who is abroad on a scouting trip.

The decision was the first the Chicagoans have been able to gain over Montreal anywhere in a span of 32 games [the 30 preceding contests show 22 victories and eight ties for the Frenchmen]. The Hawks' playoff hopes now rest on two more home games — against the Rangers Wednesday and Boston on March 15 —and three tough road matches—in Boston March 11, in Montreal March 17, and in Detroit March 18.

Canadiens Gain 2 to 1 Lead.

The Hawk cause never looked bleaker than it did after the first few minutes of the second period. Baby-faced Frank Eddolls of the Canadiens had given the Frenchmen a 1 to 0 lead in the 15th minute of the first session. From that point, the Canadiens poured it on as tho they were the team which was teetering on the edge of playoff elimination. They kept driving in on Mike Karakas until Maurice Richard, holder of the modern scoring record, chalked up goal No. 46 for this campaign. Young Les Ramsay gave the Hawks a lease with a goal in the same session.

Toe Blake, the Canadiens' great right wing, made it 3 to 1 for the visitors early in the third. When Toe counted, the clock showed 4 minutes and 7 seconds of the last period. That left only 15 minutes and 53 seconds, but Smith, Mosienko, and Pete Horeck, who also played a terrific game all night, went to work. Smith got two goals within the following minute and 41 seconds. Horeck, aided by the invaluable Mosienko and Joe Cooper, put the Chicagoans ahead for the first time at 7:45, and Smith followed thru with another pair, the first at 9:52, and the second at 17:26, with an assist to Don Grosso. The ensuing face-off in center ice, found Murph Chamberlain, Montreal center, shoving the puck to Ken Mosdell, who, in turn, moved it along to Ray Getliffe. The latter burst in on Karakas alone, before the latter had a chance to stop him, for the final goal of the night.

Hawks Defeat Montreal, 6-4; Near Play-Off

Referee Bert Hedges, in addition to a busy evening of skating up and down the ice to follow the progress of the play, was called on to assess eight penalties, one of them a major to Cooper, who appeared to be the innocent victim of a brush with Mosdell, who had to be assisted from the game. The third Montreal goal was scored just as Cooper was freed from the bastille. Horeck's tally, and Smith's third also were registered with Montreal shorthanded.

Cully Simon, able Hawk defense man, was injured early in the first period in a clash with Fernand Gauthier, and did not play the rest of the evening. Whether a fracture of his right cheekbone exists as a result will not be determined until X-rays are taken today.

VIKINGS, CENTERS WIN IN 1ST ROUND SOCCER BATTLES

The Hakoah-Centers and the Vikings emerged victorious yesterday after first round National Open cup matches. The Hakoahs defeated Hansa in Sparta stadium, 4 to 1, and the Vikings beat Necaxa in Winnemac Park stadium, 5 to 1.

The Hakoah-Hansa game was a close contest thru the first half, each team scoring once. Maxie Pearlman scored on Werner Fekker after 10 minutes of play. Oscar Giesecke of the Hansas tied the count late in the half when he bounced one off the goal post and into the net out of Goalie Bill Stein's reach.

Lehman Scores Twice.

The tie was short lived after the second half started for Dr. Julius Brant scored on a penalty shot to give the Hakoahs a lead they never relinquished. Edward Lehman, new center-forward from Detroit, scored twice for the Hakoahs late in the half to clinch victory.

Necaxa gave the Vikings a battle in the first half of their game but trailed at the intermission, 2 to 1. After a scoreless 15 minutes Paul Myellenberg produced a one goal lead for the Vikings. Enrizou Cardossa hit for Necaxa five minutes later, but Jimmy McDermott scored for the Vikings as the period ended.

MOORE FIRST IN FOX LAKE YACHT CLUB'S ICE EVENT

Moore won two races and had one second for 23 points, with his E class iceboat, Woo Woo. Specialist Ed Rollberg, U. S. N. R., was runner-up with 21 points and William Reier placed third with 18 points. Robert Langford, defending the trophy, finished fifth.

Mel Jones, sailing his Green Ghost, from the Lake Geneva [Wis.] Ice Yacht club, captured the Langworthy marathon race, sailed for the first time since 1941. CASTERS, TODAY IS DEADLINE TO ENTER TOURNEY!

This is "now or never" day for fishermen who wish to compete in the 13th annual CHICAGO TRIBUNE bait and fly casting tournament which opens Saturday at the International Sportsmen's show in the Coliseum.

The entry blank, which appears on this page, will not be printed again, and all last minute entries must be postmarked today, March 5. This closing date must be observed to provide sufficient time in which to compile entry lists and mail the contest rules.

War Bond Prizes.

More than $150 in war bonds and stamps, in addition to merchandise prizes, will be awarded to the winners of the eight preliminary events and two final contests. More than 200 entries already have been received. The final tally is expected to list more than 400. The Tribune tournament established a national record for competitors in a casting tournament when 870 anglers took part in the 1941 event at the International amphitheater.

All the casting events will be held in a huge 60 foot canvas tank now being erected in the Coliseum. A casting platform at one end of the tank will extend another 20 feet.

Log Rollers to Perform.

F. W. Kahler, manager of the International Sportsmen's show, announced yesterday that Watson Reck and Leo Wagner, champion log rollers, will perform twice daily during the show's nine day run. The two men will conduct a typical north woods rolling contest, then perform acrobatic tricks on the log as it spins in the tank.

Frank Hogan, Barrington, who has appeared in previous outdoor shows with his trained Labrador retrievers, has a new role in this year's exhibit. Hogan, recently discharged from the army, spent his spare time in military camps perfecting his skill with the bow and arrow, and will demonstrate this old art at the show.

Parsons and Brown Battle at Marigold

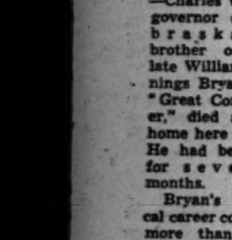
Collins Brown, 1944 Chicagoland Golden Gloves middleweight champion, who has won 10 of 12 fights with opponents in his own weight class, will try his punching prowess on a shifty welterweight named Bill Parsons in an eight round bout tonight in Marigold Gardens, Broadway and Grace st.

Brown, who captured the Tony Zale Golden Gloves sportsmanship trophy last year, knocked out six of his previous professional foes, his victims including Lou Angelucci, whom he stopped twice. Brown should beat Parsons, but whether he adds the Danville, Ill., boxer to his knockout string is questionable.

Butch Maxwell, Muskegon, Mich., junior lightweight, and Ralph Balkin, his 130 pound stablemate, will appear in supporting matches, the former in a six round semi-windup against Ted Christ

CHARLES BRYAN, POLITICAL FIGURE FOR 50 YRS., DIES

Brother and Manager of 'Great Commoner.'



Charles W. Bryan.

Lincoln, Neb., March 4 [Special].—Charles W. Bryan, 78, three times governor of Nebraska and brother of the late William Jennings Bryan, the "Great Commoner," died at his home here today. He had been ill for several months.

Bryan's political career covered more than half a century and reached its high point in 1924 when he was the Democratic nominee for Vice President on the ticket headed by John W. Davis.

Known as "Brother Charlie" during the first half of his career because of the eminence of his spectacular brother, Bryan overcame this handicap to carve out a name in his own right in state and national political affairs.

Attended University of Chicago.

Bryan was born in Salem, Ill., Feb. 10, 1867. He was the second son and third child of Circuit Judge Silas Lillard Bryan and Maria Elizabeth Jennings Bryan. William Jennings Bryan was his senior by seven years.

Bryan attended Salem public schools, Illinois college at Jacksonville, and the University of Chicago.

When William Jennings Bryan won the Democratic nomination for the Presidency with his "Cross of Gold" speech in 1896, the younger brother accepted an invitation to act as the candidate's secretary. Thereafter Charles moved rapidly up the political ladder. He managed the two subsequent Presidential campaigns of his brother and played an important part in whipping delegates into line at conventions.

The Democratic national convention of 1924 was torn by the bitter battle between the forces of Al Smith and William G. McAdoo. After John W. Davis had been nominated for the Presidency on the 103d ballot, the delegates turned to Bryan in the hope his name would heal some of the party wounds caused by William Jennings Bryan's opposition to Smith.

Elected Governor.

Charles was nominated, and his older brother stumped the country in behalf of the Davis-Bryan ticket which, however, was badly defeated. Back in Nebraska, Bryan won the Democratic nominations for governor in 1926 and 1928, but lost to Republican opponents. He was elected governor in 1930 and again in 1932.

He was a candidate for congress in 1940 and in 1942.

Bryan's wife was his boyhood sweetheart, the former Bessie Louise Brokaw, of Salem, Ill., whom he married in 1892. They had three children.

Funeral services will be held at the First Baptist church here at 3 p. m. Tuesday. Burial will be in Lincoln's Wyuka cemetery.

S. B. Rogers, Advertising Manager, Dies in Evanston

Memorial services for Stanley B. Rogers, 67, of 1635 Hinman av., Evanston, western advertising sales manager for the Sports Field Publishing company, who died Friday in Evanston hospital, will be held at 4 p. m. Thursday in St. Matthew's Episcopal church in Evanston. He is survived by his widow, Alice, two sons, Gordon H. and Charles E. Rogers, and a daughter, Miss Gene Rogers.

SHELL PLANTS ARE HEALTHIEST, ARMY REPORTS

The healthiest war workers in the country are in ammunition plants, the army ordnance department reported yesterday. It cited army ordnance facilities showing the lowest rate in the United States for lost time, occupational injuries, and occupational diseases.

A comprehensive health and hygiene program was given much of the credit for the record. In Chicago this program is under the supervision of Col. T. G. Gerber. Assistance is provided by personnel from the surgeon general's office and the United States public health service.

Every ordnance plant has well-staffed and fully equipped medical and safety departments. Physical examinations, job studies to provide the safest and most healthful working conditions, personal hygiene instruction, nutrition, and recreation advice are other factors.

He said that such cancers in males over 40 cause more deaths than cancers of any other organ, are the second largest cause of cancer death among women, and lead to one-third of all cancer deaths. Educational programs for gastric cancer, Dr. Ivy said, were more difficult than for early diagnosis of most other kinds.

Braunstein said he will call a meeting of operators of night spots for Wednesday for an exchange of notes and observations on the workings and effect of the curfew. Fifteen men and women arrested at 2:30 a. m. today as patrons of a midtown sneakery were fined $5 each on disorderly conduct charges in week-end court.

A "week of reasonableness" promised by Mayor La Guardia in enforcement of the curfew is scheduled to end tonight. Downtown all-night restaurants were packed until near dawn today, and many hip flasks were in evidence. Observers said Times Square filled up shortly after midnight with revelers.

Ohio River Floodwaters Halted at Cincinnati

Cincinnati, O., March 4 (AP).—The Ohio river, which appeared to be headed for disastrous flood heights in the last few days, checked its rise abruptly early today and stood at 62.2 feet. Experts lowered their crest predictions to 62.5 feet. Earlier forecasts said the rain swollen stream would reach 64.5—12.5 feet above flood stage. The 2½ feet variation spells the difference between an almost "business as usual" condition and the loss of perhaps millions of dollars in destruction of property.

Small Chicago Firms Gain in Number in '44

Reversing the trend of the two preceding years, the number of small business establishments in Chicago and Cook county increased slightly in 1944, a survey showed yesterday.

Latest figures of the state finance department on the number of establishments in Chicago paying the retailers' occupational tax showed a net increase of 123 since Dec. 31, 1943. The trend also was reflected in utility companies' figures on connections and disconnections of electrical, gas, and telephone service, classified as to types of businesses.

Confectioneries Hard Hit.

Topping the list of establishments that went out of business in the city last year were confectionery stores, faced with shortages of merchandise and help. The number of combined grocery and meat markets also decreased, altho stores selling groceries or meats alone increased.

Other business fatalities included barber shops, auto accessory stores, cigar stores, hand laundries, filling stations, appliance and radio stores, and shoe stores. Most of these have been severely affected by shortages of merchandise, rationing, or man power difficulties.

High also on the list of fatalities were heating and plumbing establishments, bowling and billiard halls, coal, wood and ice dealers, stationers and printers, hardware stores, barber and beauty shops, and lumber yards, as shown by state finance department records for all of Cook county.

Taverns, Gift Shops Increase.

Against these losses, substantial gains were shown in the number of taverns, restaurants, liquor, jewelry, and gift and novelty stores, delicatessens, furniture stores, and florists, Commonwealth Edison company figures disclosed. Funeral directors, paint and glass dealers, sporting goods stores, and second hand stores also had a good year.

Utility company officials said that opening of new establishments more than compensated for losses of small businesses.

Commonwealth Edison reported a net gain of approximately 800 commercial customers during the year, nearly 1 per cent of the total in that classification. Edison reported a net loss of 1,600 commercial customers in 1943.

The total of commercial customers served by the Peoples Gas, Light, and Coke company was increased by 210 during 1944, against a decrease of 1,500 during 1943.

The Illinois Bell Telephone company closed 1944 with a net gain in Chicago of 7,751 business lines.

WHEAT EXPORTS FOR LIBERATED AREAS INCREASE

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., March 4.—Shipments of wheat owned by the Commodity Credit corporation to liberated areas are increasing now that more cargo space in allied ships is becoming available, it was learned tonight.

Reports that 100 million bushels would be sent abroad during March, April and May could not be confirmed. Spokesmen for the CCC declined to estimate the amount involved. They said, however, that the program is a "continuing one," and that the shipments are increasing.

The CCC has approximately 75 million bushels of wheat on hand, and new stocks are expected to become available May 1 from loans made on 1944 wheat.

Grain for the liberated areas is purchased by the war department, a CCC spokesman said. It is delivered at "shipside" and the army arranges for the shipping and determines the destination.

VAST RECEIPTS SWELL CASH OF GARMENT UNION

Resources Exceed 16 Million.

BY THOMAS FURLONG.

Among the financially powerful unions is the International Ladies Garment Workers which in four years has added more than 9 million dollars to its cash resources which today exceed 16 million dollars.

Founded in 1900, the union was a charter member of the Committee for Industrial Organization, launched in 1935 and now known as Congress of Industrial Organizations. In 1940, however, the garment workers broke away from the CIO, resuming affiliation with the American Federation of Labor.

The union has increased its membership 65,000 in the last four years. Present membership is 304,389, divided among 362 local organizations, said David Dubinsky, president.

Receipts Top 12 Million.

Receipts of the union and its affiliated groups exceed 12 million dollars a year of which the principal source is union dues. Its most recent report, for 1943, listed total receipts of $12,333,000 of which two-thirds represented income of the general union fund, locals, and joint boards. The other third went into various special union funds such as the health and vacation fund which totals more than 3 million dollars.

Dubinsky claims that the ILGW's financial statement is the most detailed issued by a labor union. It includes a record of the receipts of each constituent organization and a breakdown of the weekly pay roll of officers and workers of each unit.

The union is adding to its resources. Its income in recent years consistently has exceeded expenditures. In 1943 the union spent $5,866,000 from its general fund, compared with receipts of $8,202,000. Expenditures were made chiefly for administration and organization, for donations, and operation of joint cloak and dress boards. After meeting all such expenditures an unexpended balance for the year of $2,336,290 remained. Among the union's assets is a $510,000 investment in its headquarters building in New York.

Cement Workers Make Report.

Another union which makes a detailed financial statement to members is the United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers [AFL], which has headquarters in Chicago, with a membership of 25,000 in 200 local organizations. Its report includes a statement of salaries paid to officers and staff members and other disbursements.

William Schoenberg, president, and Toney Gallo, secretary and treasurer, have also developed a system for keeping a check on the finances of local organizations and regularly employ outside auditors to examine the books of the parent organization. A comparatively new union, formed in 1936, the parent organization had income of $226,862 in the year ended July 31.

[The finances of Sidney Hillman's Amalgamated Clothing Workers will be discussed in a subsequent article.]

WAYNE PUMP.

Please report on Wayne Pump company, particularly its post-war outlook.—W. L.

Altho this manufacturer of gasoline filling station pumps and other equipment has continued to report substantial earnings since Pearl Harbor, profits have been below those of immediate pre-war years. Because of war time restrictions affecting manufacture and sale of pumps, a large potential demand is believed to have accumulated.

Some time ago the company estimated that domestic demand for gasoline pumps in the first post-war year would total 214,000, compared with an average of 115,000 sold annually from 1937 thru 1941. Statistics from other industry sources indicate the possibility of several years of substantial business in replacing unfit or obsolete pumps.

Wayne's leading line in normal times was its computing meter pumps, which record gallonage and total price simultaneously. It owns patents relating to computing pumps and other products, and part of its revenues are royalty income. Many new products have been developed during the war and approved for use by government engineers, and production of air compressors has been increased.

Earnings per share on the 289,659 shares in recent fiscal years ended Nov. 30 have been: 1944, $2.60; 1943, $2.80; 1942, $2.82; 1941, $3.46; 1940, $3.18. In the four years prior to 1940, profit averaged $4.28. The dividend rate from 1940 on has been $2 a year. Net working capital as of Nov. 30, 1944, was $4,853,000. There is no long term debt.

ASSERTS RAILS, WITH FREEDOM, WOULD PROSPER

Financial prospects of the railroads are favorable if national income is maintained at a high level and the government adopts a policy of a self-supporting transportation system, Gustav Metzman, president of the New York Central Railroad company, said yesterday in the annual report for 1944.

Under such conditions the roads can look forward to "satisfactory earnings despite the more extensive competition of other agencies of transportation which is generally anticipated after the war," he said.

Modernization Needed.

He warned, however, that the railroad plant must be modernized to take advantage of lessons learned during the war and to permit operation under new and higher standards.

As an initial step in this direction, the New York Central is developing two more powerful coal-fired locomotives and has joined with other eastern roads in experiments with a coal burning steam turbo-electric engine, Metzman said. His road also is testing radio communication and is seeking consumer advice on equipment to be used in the 300 lightweight, streamlined passenger cars ordered last year.

Reviewing the last year, he said the company and affiliated lines employed 136,000, of whom 4,000 were Mexican nationals brought to this country to relieve a critical man power shortage.

Net Income Drops.

As previously reported net income for the year ended Dec. 31, 1944, was $35,789,939, or $5.55 a share, substantially less than in 1943 because of higher material and wage costs even tho 1944 gross earnings reached record levels. In 1943 net income was $62,734,050, or $9.73 a share.

The company's total capital obligations on Dec. 31 were $858,180,288, representing a reduction from a year earlier of $33,786,774.

FORMAL BIDDING ON U. S. SURPLUS GOODS ORDERED

New procedure and forms for use in competitive bidding on government owned surplus consumer goods were announced yesterday by F. A. Mapes, Chicago regional director of the treasury procurement division. Prospective bidders will be furnished bids forms containing detailed descriptions of the property offered and will be told the day and hour when bids for such property are to be opened. Heretofore informal bidding by letter, telephone, telegraph, or personal interview has been acceptable. Also offering without a definite closing time for submission of bids is to be discontinued. Mapes said bidders would be entitled to be represented at the opening of bids.

A proposed two for one split of common stock and the authorization of 250,000 shares of new preferred stock will be acted upon by stockholders of May Department Stores company at the annual meeting April 3. The company plans to issue 150,000 of the new prefefred shares, if approved, thru Goldman, Sachs & Co. and Lehman Brothers.

J.R. Thompson Chain's Profit Lower in 1944

Net income of the John R. Thompson company, Chicago operator of a chain of restaurants, decreased in 1944, John R. Thompson Jr., president, disclosed yesterday in his annual report. Profit was $504,203, equal to $1.70 a share of stock, compared with $811,271, or $2.74 a share in 1943. Dollar sales decreased to $15,254,189 last year from $15,554,576. The report said more than 59 million customers were served during 1944.

J. R. Thompson Jr.

Rationing regulations, difficulties in obtaining merchandise, and the shortage of workers caused operating difficulties, Thompson said. War time conditions prevented opening any new restaurants, he added, "but it is our policy to expand operations as soon as government restrictions have been removed."

Continues Realty Disposals.

The company continued a policy of disposing of unneeded real estate. Part of the losses on such sales were charged against a special reserve previously created for that purpose and the remainder deducted from current earnings. Thompson said the major part of the program of disposing of real estate and unprofitable leases had been completed. Because of these losses only $44,000 was needed for federal income taxes, the report said.

Monsanto Chemical company sales last year again rose to a new high, but net earnings decreased, reflecting higher labor costs, higher taxes, and fixed prices, said Edgar M. Queeny, chairman. Profit dipped to $5,077,192, or $3.30 a share, from $5,315,769, or $3.56 a share. Sales rose 6½ per cent to $86,996,391.

LAY CIGARET CRISIS TO AAA TOBACCO CUT

Find Other Answers in Factory Survey.

BY FRANK HUGHES.

Why can't we buy cigarets? The manufacturers—the fellows who turn them out by the billion each month—have several answers for that burning question, and, despite the variety of their individual problems, all of them seem pretty well agreed.

A survey of four major cigaret factories, run by four of the 10 major tobacco processing companies in Louisville, Ky.; Winston-Salem, N. C., and Durham, N. C., produced these answers to the cigaret shortage, listed in order of their importance:

1. An acute shortage of aged, leaf tobacco, brought about because manufacturers were limited in the amount of tobacco they could buy two and three years ago under the federal government's triple-A program and tobacco acreage reduction scheme. There is a bumper crop of tobacco today, but it was grown too late to alleviate the shortage this year.

2. Enormously increased army and navy priority orders for soldiers and sailors overseas. Cigaret production is up everywhere, but the army and navy are taking from 40 to 60 per cent of the output of the factories, leaving fewer cigarets for civilians than they had even in 1943.

3. A terrific upswing in the civilian consumption of cigarets. Government agencies estimate that the demand for cigarets has jumped 12.6 per cent each year since 1940, and probably rose higher than that in 1944. Increased purchasing power thru war time wages is the greatest factor, they say. In addition, war-working women who never used tobacco before are smoking today.

4. A division of the already thin supply of civilian cigarets with soldiers and sailors stationed in this country. Uniformed men off post buy their cigarets from retail outlets, and 60 million Christmas packages, a good portion of which could be expected to contain cigarets bought by civilians, were shipped to fighting men overseas.

5. A labor shortage in the cigaret factories, which is far from being a critical condition, and is not found everywhere. Tobacco farming is listed by the war man power commission as an "essential industry," but processing of tobacco into smokeable form is regarded as "nonessential."

Have Enough Workers.

Even in the face of this contradiction, most cigaret factories are able to hire enough workers to process their lean stocks of aged tobacco.

The people who gave these answers included factory managers, production supervisors, federal employment office officials, county agents, and factory workers themselves in the cities where cigarets are produced. Directors and executives of tobacco companies also were questioned in their home offices.

The cigaret makers say they have been investigated by just about every federal agency in Washington, and many of them were weary of answering questions.

The cigaret industry is booming. Manufacturers produced 251 billion cigarets in 1942, 296 billion in 1943, and 324 billion in 1944. But the army and navy stepped in and in 1943 purchased 39 billion, buying up another 85 billion in 1944. This meant that American civilians got only 239 billion in 1944.

Far in Excess of Estimates.

The last growing season produced a bumper crop of tobacco, far in excess even of triple-A estimates. Burley, for instance, totaled 600 million pounds, 50 per cent more than the 10 year average and about 150 million pounds more than the estimate.

Manufacturers, therefore, were allowed to buy 120 per cent of the burley they used in the preceding year, and 105½ per cent of the flue-cured tobacco. This tobacco, however, cannot be used until it is aged from 18 months to three years.

The triple-A agents and county agents in the tobacco country say that while quotas and allotments may have worked a hardship, tobacco would be selling for 10 cents a pound today, instead of 45 cents, without them. All of the plant managers and tobacco company officials agreed that they certainly do not want to see tobacco selling at "distress levels" because it would penalize farmers unfairly and cause them to grow less tobacco.

Sharply Critical of System.

Both manufacturers and farmers seem generally to be content with today's price scale for raw tobacco, but the manufacturers are sharply critical of a system which keeps the price up there thru "scarcity" so that they are unable to meet the demand for their product. They do not pretend to be gifted with second sight, but their experience in the war was reason enough to believe, as far back as 1942, that the demand for cigarets would increase, they say.

Some of the manufacturers are disgusted by reports of pilfering in army-navy shipments overseas. Col. Louis C. Webster of the quartermaster general's office, told a senate investigating committee recently that pilferage in army shipments "averages from 10 to 30 per cent in some theaters."

Labor shortages and machinery replacement are definitely less of a factor in the cigaret industry than some previous surveys would indicate. Some of the largest factories in the industry are located in Winston-Salem, Durham, and Reidsville, N. C., and in Richmond, Va. Durham and Reidsville are listed by the WMC as labor surplus areas. There are more workers there than jobs. Winston-Salem is a self-sufficient area, where there is no surplus of workers, but also no shortage. Only Richmond is a labor shortage area.

No Trouble in Hiring.

Even so, most cigaret factories have no trouble hiring because they have relatively high wage scales and because they have been the industrial backbone of the communities for years and offer job security. Most of them are not complaining about employment ceilings because they do not have the aged tobacco to keep many more workers busy anyway.

The United States employment service offices in the North Carolina tobacco communities take a tolerant view of the cigaret factories' "nonessential" status for several reasons, among them that cigarets are essential to the army and navy, that there is no shortage of workers there, and that the factories always have been an economic boon to their communities in good times as well as bad.

One tobacco company executive pointed to an industry estimate that smokers produced only 20 billion "roll-your-own" variety of cigarets in 1944, against 46 billion 400 million hand rolled cigarets in 1940, and remarked sadly that this was one trend likely to be reversed in 1945.
